ps your a real swell kid, stay that way!

Returning from summers of industry and/or pleasure, S-Mites plunged into another nine months of feverish activity. Plans for 1957-58, devised during the summer awaited only the touch of the students' hands. The year had scarcely begun when the Flu hit Shawnee-Mission. Nearly five hundred students succumbed as the swollen absence list continued to grow. No sooner was this crisis passed when another wave of excitement swept through the building. Red roses appeared, and members packed maroon and gray uniforms when the band eagerly accepted an invitation to march in the Tournament of Roses Parade. A special concert, fund-raising drives, and donations from all over the area made the invitation a reality. Not to be outdone, the vocal music department and the orchestra staged the greatest production in S-M's musical history, Oklahoma! Other "first's" for S-M included a student exchange program. Two outstanding S-Mites from each class were sent to live and learn in Dallas, Oklahoma City, and Tulsa while students from these cities visited S-M. Then in April came the National Safety Convention. With delegates from forty-six states, Alaska, and Hawaii, S-M hosted the largest convention of its kind in the nation's history. An eventful year? Most observers agreed that it was. This was a year filled with experiences which helped mold personality and develop character, and FROM THESE WE GREW. These experiences are recorded here, for now and forever.

A bolt of cloth . . . the tools of a mechanic . . . endless assignments in a mountain of textbooks. From these we grew to a greater knowledge with which to cope with our fast-paced world. Time spent carrying out the duties of an office . . . eager participation in a variety of activities. From these we learned both to lead wisely and to follow willingly to achieve common goals. Loss to a rival in the big game . . . victory in a hard-fought football game . . . groans and cheers from an excited Pep Club. From these we grew in sportsmanship, players and spectators alike. Projects in clubs to benefit others . . . jobs done cheerfully and without reward. From these we realized the importance of working unselfishly toward a worthwhile end. Personalities developed during the years at S-M, and figures began to stand out—one for a ready smile; another for ability in the classroom; still another for athletic accomplishment. The most obvious and inevitable growth was that in stature. All of these—knowledge, leadership, sportsmanship, service, personality, stature—were developed in our growth at S-M. FROM THESE WE GREW.

Joshua may have caused ancient Jericho's walls to tumble, but even S-M's oversized tribe cannot shake this familiar building.

the building—used

The plan appeared thirty-six years ago, suited to the growing needs of this area. It was Shawnee-Mission! Invaded by approximately two hundred enthusiastic students, the original structure consisted of present-day math department, faculty room, the crafts room, part of the kitchen, and the cafeteria. However, the growth spread in 1936, and the enlarged student body streamed back and forth under an arcade which connected the east building to the west, composed of the language department, auditorium, and girls' gym. In seven years a lump formed in the shape of a mechanics building used also for vocational agriculture. But over-consumption caused a great bulge in 1951. Rampant construction resulted in the boys' gym, a library, a new wing of classrooms, the music department, the office, a commercial area; and everywhere stretched halls, a mile and an eighth long, in all. Accommodating not only people but cars, S-M supplied a third parking lot for the convenience of that special group, the seniors. When S-M's walls bulged with every space utilized, the growth was prepared for transfer to the new senior high. Growing too were 2800 people, each housing a mind, a soul, a personality—all growing.

HOWARD D. McEACHEN
Superintendent

A telephone demanding to be answered . . . a desk stacked high with papers . . . problems from six schools, requiring solutions . . . these were the trade marks of the busy executive of Shawnee-Mission. Spending half of his time at S-M and the rest in the four junior highs and the new high school, Dr. Howard D. McEachen was among the most active members of the administrative staff. Problems of growth resulted in a larger student body, yet tending to its needs was just one of many problems.

Supervising a staff of 280 proved to be no light task, but an even greater challenge existed in building a new high school and in dividing the student body. The job of daily orienting new students and the perennial duty of firmly establishing S-M's academic reputation have, for thirteen years, rounded out Dr. Mac's schedule.

Most businessmen might crumble under a load such as this, yet Dr. McEachen regularly met all challenges that arose to present him with new problems.

policy-maker, guidance directors

"But I don't care if I should be enrolled in the girls' choir—boys' glee club sounds much more interesting!" Not all the problems presented to Mrs. Florence Huber and A. Palmer Snodgrass were this simple to solve, but through their special brand of effort, they gave S-Mites the needed reassurance that helped keep the students on an even keel. Among numerous other responsibilities, it was the job of Mrs. Huber to check over 700 transcripts and see that every senior would meet graduation requirements. She was also a valuable Student Congress sponsor. "Pop" Snodgrass became known to interested upperclassmen as a human file of information about colleges and scholarships, and his ready advice on what to do after high school graduation. Both guidance counselors were active in suggesting plans of study for students, and administering various kinds of tests to them.

Summer found "Pop" scaling the Colorado Rockies, while Mrs. Huber exercised a green thumb in her garden; but at the approach of fall, they abandoned their own mountains and molehills to tackle the woes that befall high school students. Whether the problem was urgent or trivial, S-Mites knew a friendly chat with either of these sincere counselors would assist greatly in solving the dilemma.

MURLIN WELCH
Principal

Growth, change, improvement . . . these were ready words in the vocabulary of Shawnee-Mission's principal, G. Murlin Welch. The growth of Shawnee-Mission provided many vivid contrasts with the past. Since coming to S-M in 1937, Mr. Welch witnessed startling changes. A student body of five hundred persons in 1937 grew into an enrollment of twenty-seven hundred in 1957. In twenty years, a faculty of thirty persons became a staff of nearly one hundred. But even more amazing were the increasing responsibilities of the principal. Each day, Mr. Welch was confronted by a growing world of details concerning attendance, enrollment, schedules, and extra-curricular activities. Correspondence, public relations, and parent-teacher problems were added duties.

All the details of administration were only the means of attaining the goal of Shawnee-Mission High School . . . education. The principal's most important responsibility was guiding the school in achieving this goal.

"Dr. Bruning? He could be—anywhere!" As Director of Curriculum of the entire Shawnee-Mission school district, Herbert Bruning was rarely seen any one place for long. Analyzing and studying new text books and workbooks seemed to be a never-ending task to him; however, this was not his only job. He also kept an up-to-date record of the academic preparation of the school's staff members, and worked with teachers in the continuous revision of classroom curriculum. Responsible for all matters pertaining to attendance, clubs, and discipline was Vice-Principal Carl Ison. His job included keeping activity period running smoothly. Directing and supervising the activity programs, Mr. Ison still found time in his busy schedule to help bewildered students with their problems. The ever-growing administration received a new member in Guy Barnes, Administrative Assistant. While certainly not new to Shawnee-Mission, this was Mr. Barnes' freshman year at the new post. He supervised S-M's expanded transportation program which included revising bus schedules and routes, directing safety programs, and maintaining accurate insurance records. Coping with these overwhelming tasks was a full-time job for S-M's corps of administrators.

SCHOOL BOARD. Seated: Howard D. McEachen, Roy E. Welch, Richard V. Garrett. Standing: Mel Flowers, Kenneth P. Rankin, Charles A. Long.

The five-man court handed down its ruling, and a new policy went into force at Shawnee-Mission. The legal tribunal, S-M's Board of Education, consisted of Messrs. Melvin Flowers, Roy Welch, Richard Garrett, Kenneth Rankin, and Charles Long. If a legal problem concerning the district arose, or if the six schools in the area needed new equipment, this group gave the final "go-ahead" on such questions. These five men, chosen for four-year terms, were the only elected officials of the district. Issues arising from year to year included the payment of faculty salaries and the sale of district bonds. In addition, the board members devoted much time to the establishment of special classes for improvement of reading, for handicapped pupils, and for particularly gifted students. The biggest problems of the "court" dealt with handling the increased enrollment of the area. Special attention was given to the construction of the new high school, as well as to the employment of new teachers to meet the growth of the student body. Working with its administrative official, Dr. McEachen, the board approved the division of the enrollment between the two schools, S-M North and East. The court awaited the next school term and the many varied cases the six schools would present to its members for decisions.

"You're wanted in the office." This message usually sent terror into the mind of its hearer.

While this was a common phobia, there was seldom any reason for it. Usually it was just a check to see if a locker partner ever found the combination to the communal cubby hole, or the identification of a misnamed absentee.

Innumerable assignments confronted the office staff, and the increased enrollment multiplied its work. Compiling huge absence lists of over 600 students during the flu epidemic was a unique experience, while passing out the white absence permits and the dreaded pink excuses was a habitual duty. Behind a high counter setting off the office staff's domain, files housed transcripts and permanent records, all kept intact through the efficiency of the staff. Typewriters tapped continually as S-M's correspondence was carried on, and the business of operating the six district schools was completed. Training a junior staff to synchronize activities at the new high school provided an additional task. Calmly and cheerfully these ladies handled the work that flowed through the office, even to aiding the desperate individuals attempting to get the time stamped on absence permits. Whatever the cause for a trip to the office, results were seldom fatal.

future faculty and fellow former students

"We, the teachers of Shawnee-Mission . . ." This phrase backed up the actions and reflected the purpose of the Shawnee-Mission Faculty Association. In order to promote cooperation, provide a united voice in school affairs, and cultivate personal friendship and fellowship, the teachers of Shawnee-Mission High School actively participated in the faculty association. In the eleventh year since its formation, the association included members from the high school and the four junior highs. In its goals, through its activities, and by its accomplishments, it was fulfilling a purpose and insuring the future of the teaching profession.

Several times during the year, the classrooms of Shawnee-Mission were invaded by an eager group of future faculty members. Fresh from the campuses and brimming over with educational ideas, student teachers from many parts of Kansas learned to apply the theories taught them in college classrooms. By grading English themes, conducting science experiments, supervising physical education exercises, and assigning social science projects, they gained the experience which would be their passport to the future.

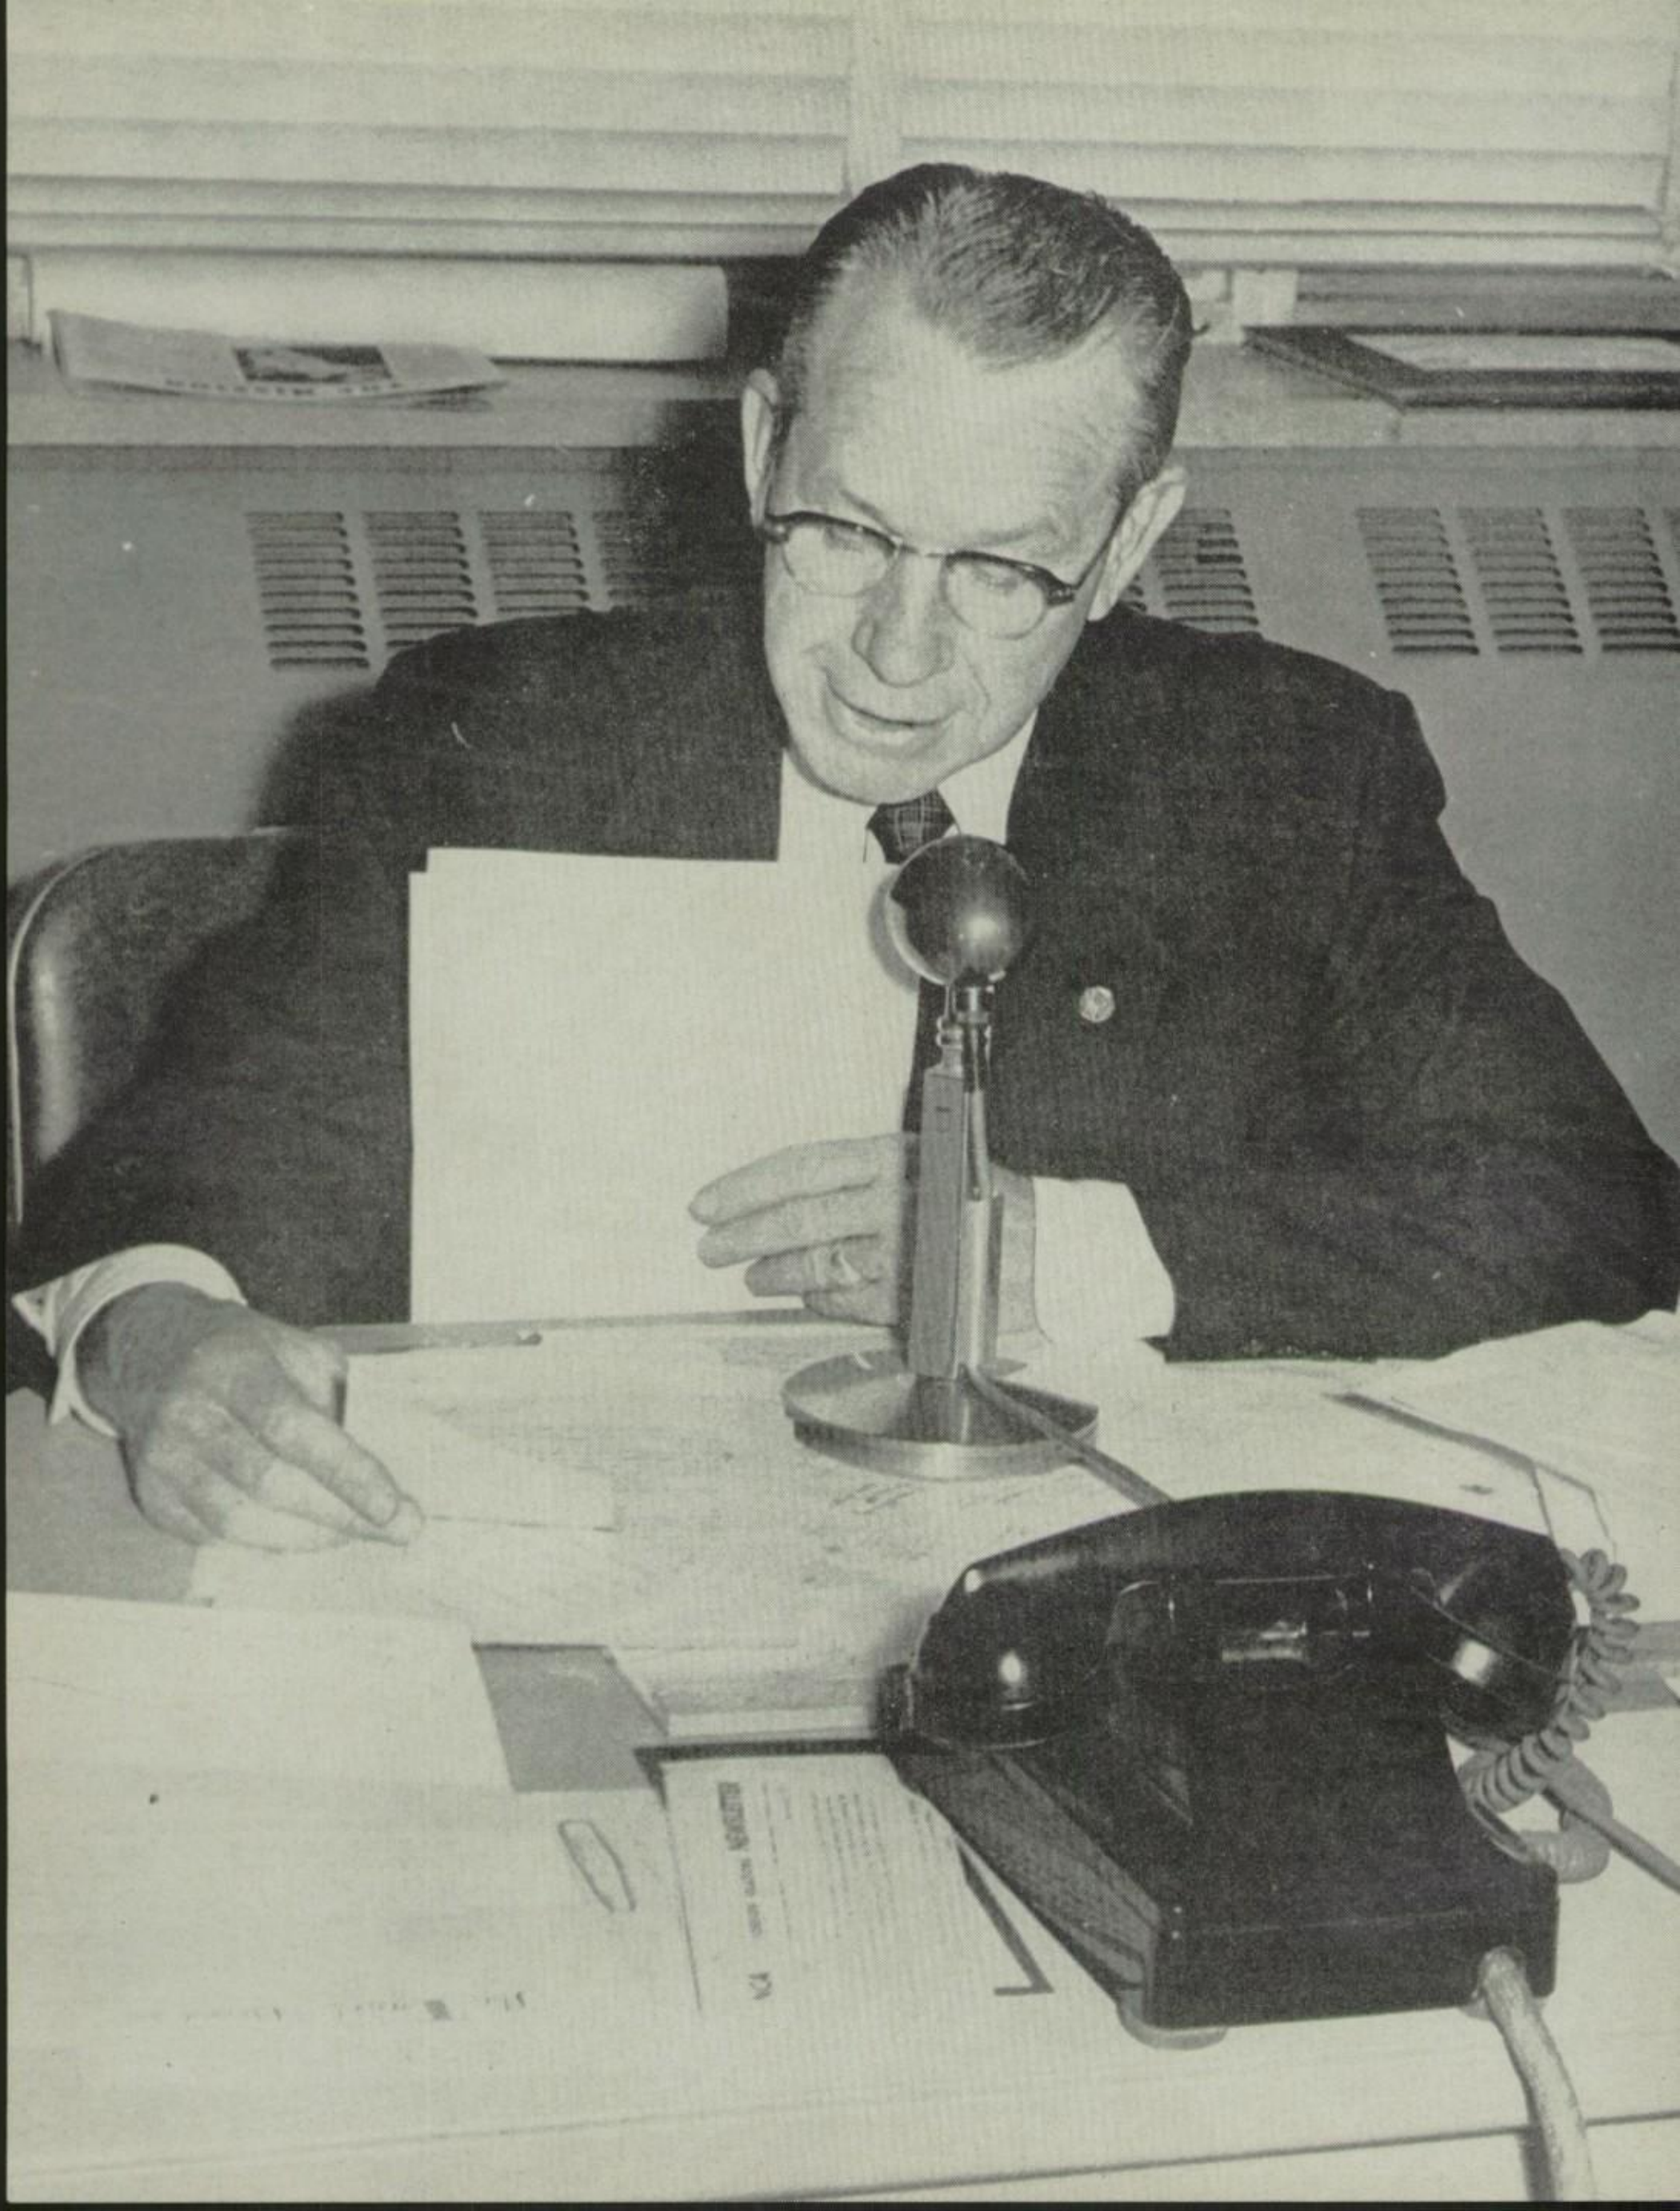
s-m triumvirate: parent, pupil, prof

Wondering how their teen-agers ever located classes in room XX or OO in the scant five minutes allowed were numerous confused parents attending the annual autumn Back-To-School Nite sponsored by Shawnee-Mission's Parent-Teacher Association. This meeting, and the remaining three, initiated a fresh concept in P.T.A. programming: more student participation in the organization's activities to encourage better understanding between students, their teachers, and parents. For the first time, all S-Mites were invited to accompany Mom and Dad to Back To School Nite.

Parents and teachers were to see more of these familiar faces in future P.T.A. meetings. Yuletide carolers serenaded in December, and the last meeting of the year featured a demonstration of many other forms of S-Mite talent. Achievement of the Parent-Teacher Association's goal of bringing about closer family-school relationships was also aided by the parent education classes. Held at night for the first time, the four meetings on "Our Teen-agers—How Better to Understand and Guide Them" drew crowds of interested parents. Thus, the two thousand adult members of the Parent-Teacher Association combined efforts with Shawnee-Mission students toward a fuller understanding of the problems and effects of today's high school education system. Mrs. George E. Moeller, the P.T.A.'s chief executive, her nine efficient officers, and the twenty-two hard working committee chairmen synchronized this program to assure its success.

Mrs. Duer, presiding member of what might be called S-M's Draft Board for PTA, flashes a welcoming smile on three incoming members.



classroom heroes . . . . . blackboard wizards . . . the faculty members . .

A faculty for . . . making life miserable for unstudied students, inspiring even the most uninspired, grading essays, mathematical calculations, scientific projects, and tests of all kinds, and taking an interest in each individual person. Teachers also participated in extra-curricular phases of school life. Bundled in warm wraps they matched activity-ticket photos with students' faces. During basketball season they collected tickets and rooted for the Indians. At six or seven o'clock in the evening, lights still shone in the S-M windows as debate coaches suffered or rejoiced with their teams in the final round; sponsors of the two publications saw that their staffs met the everpresent deadlines; athletic coaches helped boys develop winning plays; and the drama and music department heads prepared for their next public performance. When problems arose, such as how to requisition money for the Pep Club, where to get entry blanks for the model home contest, or what is an unusual world history project, teachers gladly helped their students find the right solution. Before, during, and after school faculty members were on duty to help solve that one hard equation or listen to book reports. S-Mites learned in their first days at school that the person sitting behind the desk did more than pass out tests and assignments. They found in each faculty member a teacher, an advisor, and a friend.

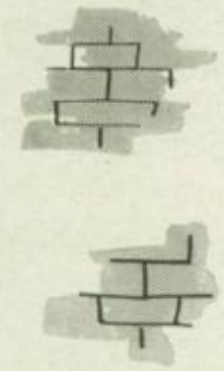
variety, the spice of s-m's library



Although the library was a faulty bomb shelter in event of an air raid, it was more frequently sought after in other events. A haunt for those aspiring students seeking last-minute book reports, it was considered invaluable in time of term papers, American history reports, and assorted other dilemmas; in addition, a comfortable and inspiring atmosphere afforded an opportunity for concentration action, while in other parts of the library, as well as between the covers of nearly 10,000 volumes, live action ran rampant. Employing his time in a number of ways, a student entered, pencil and paper in hand, and headed for a table, some bookshelf, or perhaps the periodical room; and, aided by the assistant, Mrs. Mildred Walker, or by Mrs. Ailine Thomas, head librarian, he could locate the Fisherman's Guide, Vital Speeches, or even a pamphlet on opportunities in plastics. Each hour, five students, working for a half-credit, alternated jobs, stamping at the desk, indexing books, or shelving in the back-issue room. The conference rooms were convenient for taking a make-up test, practicing a debate speech, rehearsing play lines; and, for a number of people taking part in the accelerated reading program, speed and comprehension were increased. Except for payment of an occasional fine, every other experience offered was a rewarding one.

"No rocks in these rolls," smiles Mrs. Daisy Normun assuredly.

"I think I've got it!" As statements like this increased, and many students enumerated their symptoms of Asiatic flu, flocks of people headed for the S-M hospital where available bed space quickly vanished. Registered Nurse Mrs. Mildred Noel coped with this modern crisis as she had with various crises in the past. Blue cards were proof of her direction of the dental program. Spare moments from destroying germs invariably found her busy with another facet of her job—recording absentees and checking up on wanderers.

Pencil scratching ceased in the study halls; anticipation increased; and pans clattered behind the window barriers. Such sounds meant that fourteen hundred balanced meals were being prepared under Mrs. Daisy Norman's direction. She also developed new ideas like the food-on-carts lunch line and twelve-inch hot dogs to fortify students for rigorous afternoon work. Both long "chow" lines, stretching into the halls, and numerous requests for her to speak in classes proved S-M's appreciation of Norman's nutrition.

When clocks unwound, the temperature dipped, lockers jammed, or the grass grew too long, Mr. Fred Stumbo was the first person contacted. His ingenuity and industry as Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds were two prime factors in S-M's smooth functioning. He scurried between the junior highs and Shawnee-Mission keeping everything from sprinklers to the public address system in proper working condition for the benefit of all students.

Pauline Jennings, Erma Harlow, Goldie Martain, Malvena Seute, Mildred Phillips, Mary Marshall, Elizabeth Willis, Violet Croman, Maggie Lee Murray, Lucille Piggott, Bessie Leak, and Leva Steinmetz show that too many cooks don't spoil the broth!

With a multitude of tasks confronting him, Fred Stumbo still manages a smile.

dead heroes and deathless lines

King Arthur and his noble knights of the Round Table, Julius Caesar and his faithless friends, Silas Marner and his golden Eppie; these and other characters became familiar favorites of the sophomores. Many innovations were introduced in grammar, and were eagerly absorbed by willing students. In many classes, descriptive and comprehensive writing was begun as practice for future years.

For the juniors, Shakespeare reappeared, this time as the author of Macbeth. Enthusiastically taken up at that time was the seemingly age-old battle of "Was Will Will" or wasn't he? Also, many thrilling scenes were enacted. Once again grammar was reviewed, but with the addition of more advanced information.

Seniors strolling down the hallowed halls could quickly be recognized, as they were usually carrying their beloved short story books, along with their translating implements, the vocab books. The most important selection studies by them was Hamlet, once again by Shakespeare. Much theme-writing was done in those classes, as the teachers attempted to prepare the students for college courses. A familiar legend even to the lowly sophomores was the long-awaited and much-dreaded-by-all term papers. Weeks and months were spent in preparation, but with these in history, the seniors felt as though they had crossed the last barrier. Through this complete study of their native tongue, students were impressed with the importance of grammar and fascination of literature.

knowledge in three nutshells

MICROSCOPE, oscilloscope, spectroscope—these machines and others became familiar to the many students enrolled in one of the science courses offered by Shawnee-Mission. Each of the three areas of exploration—biology, physics, and chemistry—gave opportunities for a future Curie or Einstein to gain an understanding of the many fields covered in the curriculum. Leaf and plant collections were found in the homes of biology students, and schoolroom walls were covered with these mounted specimens. Bird calls and heredity laws had to be learned. Crayfish and frogs fell before dissecting knives and became microscope specimens. Physics classes, unlike biology groups, brought much mathematics into their work with such fields as magnetism, circuit and static electricity, and light. Many laws, principles, and numerical constants had to be memorized before students could work with levers, friction planes, photometers, and similar experimental apparatus. Not a few students learned the power of electricity the hard way: through personal contact. The chemists' work with acids, metals, and crystals took them into well-known areas in the same manner that the study of the atom took them into unexplored regions. Experiments with burning bases, rusting metals, and exploding crystals provided a rich background for future work. Many unusual projects were the results of work in the science department. Working closely with their students were the twelve science teachers, who succeeded in giving their classes an insight into modern science.

as governments go, history is made

From the days when the Pharohs reigned in Egypt to the age of Sputniks, history has been made, men have pondered current issues, and governments have risen and fallen. Recreating past events and learning how to interpret the structure of a government kept S-Mites busy in their social science classes. In order to graduate, American History students struggled over the Boston Tea Party, the Gettysburg Address, and our nation's emergence from isolationism to world leadership. Seniors advanced into a comprehensive study of the Constitution. The problems that the modern world faces aroused much interest as was evidenced by students gathering material for current history reports or avidly digesting the news contained in The American Observer when test time came. Students were given a wonderful opportunity in international relations to analyze relations between countries and to find possible remedies for the Cold War tensions. S-M offered world history to all interested in receiving a complete picture of events from the dawn of civilization up to the days of jets, radar, and atomic power. Reasons and results of the decline of the Roman Empire and the bloody French Revolution were discussed fully. Valuable facts were gained by means of lectures, news magazines, and special reports; but the students left these classes able to do more than recite dates. They knew to apply successfully the lessons history had taught.

learning the language of numbers

The tool of science, the foundation of engineering, the basis of accounting, the framework of architecture—mathematics formed a bridge to the future in many vocations. Shawnee-Mission offered a wide variety of subjects for the mathematically minded. Courses in algebra, geometry, and trigonometry challenged the mental machinery of all students enrolled. Whether they were dealing with sines and cosines, knowns and unknowns, products and quotients, or angles and triangles, students learned the mastery and application of very ancient skills. They acquired a new vocabulary, a way of orderly reasoning, and a new perception into the universe. In a year when Russian scientific achievement was dramtically apparent and the threshold of space was at last penetrated, the teaching of mathematics gained a deeper significance. The student body felt a much higher respect for the whole field of mathematics when each person realized that sputniks and missiles were impossible without the magic of numbers. From the first year algebra class sweating over $a^2 + b^2 = c^2$ to the accelerated trigonometry students contemplating electronic computers, the future of American technology would be determined in the classrooms. Shawnee-Mission graduates in many occupations would someday trace their success to a common source. The scientist plotting orbits, the engineer studying specifications, and the architect drawing floor plans would claim a similar heritage: the basic mathematics practiced and mastered in the classrooms of Shawnee-Mission.

declensions, conjugations and great works

The French cloister delights Marilyn Allen and Sue Aitken.

Maps, compasses, and guides were almost needed to make the long trip to the language department. But after having found a sure path, the linguists experienced many enjoyable hours. There were few students who did not have a part at some time in the three languages, Latin, French, and Spanish. The great classics of Virgil and Cicero kept the interest of the Latin students who never forgot the endless drill over the noun declentions and verb conjugations. While grammar was the major concern of beginning French, the more advanced classes undertook the great literature of France. The Spanish students learned about the glorious history of Spain as well as conversational Spanish. But it was not the everyday classwork alone which made the language department such a large part of S-M. Outside activities were constantly being planned by the language clubs and classes. As the Christmas season approached, S-Mites awaited the traditional caroling in the halls. Wearing their country's native costume, the students represented each of the three languages. The annual banquets and assemblies were given by the different classes. An unforgettable French banquet in mysterious Algiers, the Latin dinner complete with gods and goddesses, and the Spanish fiesta-like picnic brought a clearer understanding of life in the respective countries. These and other things brought a remote world a little closer to Shawnee-Mission.

A touch of Paris permeates S-M halls as Madame Crain's French carolers serenade.

efficiency + exactness + economy = success

Strange noises could be distinguished in a music class or in the mechanics shops, but S-M's most unusual sounds originated from a particular corridor on the second floor—the commercial department. Clickety-clacks, whines, and buzzes were produced by mostly feminine students who were intent on learning to make these noises correctly. Operating almost like a business office, some classes even "broke" for lunch; however, several hundred girls who prepared for futures as receptionists or as secretaries got down to business by striving to perfect identical swirls and sweeps of a speechless language—shorthand. Down the hall in room 232, promising efficiency experts manipulated calculators and comptometers from which came unusual clicks and rhythms that showed accuracy as well as speed was imperative. One could almost hear the wheels turning as minds computed and summed up statistics which had to be correct, for here in disguise were tomorrow's bookkeepers and certified public accountants. Words like speculation, gain per cent, or debenture popped up now and then, making courses in business law and principle a little difficult. But results popped up, too: characteristics of an indignant lawyer or raging business tycoon appeared in that boy across the aisle; and the girl at the head of the class promised to excel as a private secretary. Nevertheless they owed their success to the wide variety of business courses given them at S-M.

indian's honored tribal chanters

As fresh, unseasoned wood is brought into the lumber mill, seventy-five upperclassmen filed into room 150, third hour of the first September schoolday, eager to train themselves to carry on S-M's fine a capella choir tradition. Mr. Rose and Mr. Oldham acted as chief woodworkers, and soon hewed the group into soprano, alto, tenor, and bass sections. Through daily rehearsals, the choristers' "rough edges" were planed and sanded to produce the familiar velvety tones enjoyed by all. Bright smiles and enthusiasm-plus added the final varnish of stage presence. S-M student life was enriched by the singers as they presented several assemblies, including special programs at Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter. The choir members spread Yuletide cheer over television and radio stations, and represented the high school by giving performances in other parts of Kansas. The vocalists were especially proud to be the first to wear attractive new choir pins. The neucleus of the choir was formed by the chorale, a small group which consisted of the Madrigal Singers and senior ensemble. The chorale often sparked school programs, and it was also a favorite entertainer of local civic clubs. Whether they sang a rollicking folk tune, a subdued lullaby, or a magnificent hymn, both the choir and the chorale were always sure to please their listeners.

harmony reigns in girls' choir

Me-he-wa-ha-a-a-a! floated into the halls around room 150 as the advanced mixed chorus, sophomore mixed chorus, girls' choir, and girls' glee warmed up their tonsils for a song. After many hours of diligent practicing, these sections of the vocal music department were ready for another enjoyable program. The groups, ranging in size from sixty to seventy-five, performed at many school assemblies and several extra-curricular programs. Under the patient guidance of Mr. Jess Rose and Mr. Bill Oldham, many excellent ensembles, sextets, quartets, and trios were formed. These people enjoyed working on their programs and their presentations were certain to be of extreme interest to all viewers and listeners. From these units, many of the persons for operetta chorus were chosen. Make-up artists, costume-makers, and scenery-painters resulted from other enthusiastic S-Mites. Perhaps the best music was put forth at Christmas and Easter, but everyone agreed that regardless of the season or types of music, better songsters than those at Shawnee-Mission could not have been found.

The clock hands "stated" that second hour was nearly over. Students began gathering text books when Mr. Welch broke in via the P. A. system: "Our band has been invited to play in the Tournament of Roses Parade." Following his announcement, S-M was seized by a "California or bust" attitude. Ninety-six bandsters, sporting colorful cards to proclaim their destination, collected papers, raked yards, and gave a benefit concert to earn money. The band's previous record testified that the Rosebowl Committee had made a wise selection. S-Mites appreciated the band at home football and basketball games. Led by the jaunty majorettes, the band marched into intricate formations. If the team lagged behind, a steady pounding of drums caused hoarse Indians to cheer louder. They instilled patriotism into all spectators' hearts as the notes of our national anthem came through the still air or filled a hushed gym. Yearly the band paraded for appreciative American Royal audiences or for the observers at K. U. Band Day. To end a fine year the band received a top rating at the District Contest. Whether the music played was "California, Here We Come!" or the "War Dance," Mr. George and his band won Shawnee-Mission's approval.

moods in melody

During school time, room 152 emitted strains of marches, concert pieces, and selected popular numbers, as 55 students in the "B" Band climbed toward their predominent objective, "A" Band. Members soaked up all the information to be found in the music files. Drilling diligently at home, marching, balancing instruments, bandsmen entertained fellow students at sports events, and school assemblies and performed for the community marching in parades around the area, appearing as an example of S-M's good performance at all times.

The screeches of tuning were far removed from the melodious cooperative project of entertainment which was the foremost assignment of the S-M orchestra. Enjoyable programs during Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter, as well as the annual operetta relaxed students as they absorbed a variety of moods in music. Sixty students practiced Brahams to Berlin, and stately to quite "snappy" music, continually working toward excellent for the state music festival. The contributions of the orchestra and "B" Band added highlights to the year.

masters in the making

Two students—Carole McBride and Mr. Ray Brown, K. C. U. student teacher—put their heads together over an art project.

Expounding the theory that "Anyone can draw," Mr. James Wheat guided artistic S-Mites through an extensive study of all phases of art. Fantastic paper maché masks hanging in the room displayed student handiwork and identified room 188 as S-M's art center. First year students learned color combinations as a basis for further work. Second year brought explanations and theories of tempera design along with pen and ink techniques. Common to all classes were the weekly tests of famous art reproductions in which students examined the styles and techniques of the great masters. With money scarce at Christmas time, many students made their Christmas cards in a process demanding originality as well as skill. During the second semester, S-Mites observed art students in the halls and in classes clutching paper bags. These bags proved to be necessary equipment for them, however, for they contained pieces of glass in assorted sizes, shapes, and colors. With talent and ingenuity, the artists produced beautiful glass mosaics from the seemingly useless fragments. In the spring a general exodus began, and students headed outside to draw nature first hand. Some advanced students entered their work in the Scholastic Art Award contest, while others assisted various departments with scenery. This practical application of skills gained in art classes, as well as the pure enjoyment, made this course one of the most valuable at S-M.

Napkins, yard goods, bracelets, mobiles—these were just a few of the projects completed by the 165 students enrolled in the crafts classes. Sculptures in wood and metal, pottery, and silversmithing also occupied students' time. An average craftsman invested about thirty dollars on his projects each year. He was expected to complete objects worth at least two times his investment, but many students sold their projects for ten times the original amount. The crafts students assisted Mr. Garrison to demonstrate teaching methods before the state teachers' convention in November. Members of the classes co-operated to make the award plaque for the Mission Christmas room-decorating contest. A third major activity was the design, construction, and engraving of the trophies for the Shawnee-Mission debate tournament in January. Many students printed their own Christmas cards and made gifts for their friends: earrings, pins, cuff links, pendants, and statuettes. Craftsmen were schooled in the intricacies of working with a loom, the skills required for silk screening, the work of enameling, the difficulty of a potter's wheel, and the art of centrifugal casting. Since crafts involved both artistic and manual aptitudes, the course gave training for persons who might use the skills taught in later work or who might merely be "do-it-yourself" fans.

First year, livestock; second year, crops; and third year was an advanced study of farm management. That was the agenda for the vocational agriculture students. Through the study of class and shop work the boys discovered the necessary ingredients which combine to make up the model farmer. One of the many essential ingredients was farm carpentry. In the fall the boys enthusiastically commenced operations in a new plastic greenhouse which they built themselves. Because S-M's vocational agriculture department is a Smith-Hugh's department, both the state and national governments donated money toward its completion. The boys then began studying, testing, and experimenting with fertilizers. Another plastic house was built for the exclusive project of raising chickens. Each year the vocational agriculture apprentices, on their own, participate in an individual farming program of poultry raising or beef feeding. Many times these projects furnished the means by which boys entered college. The third year classes, in their study of farm management, delved into the science of economics as they discussed the purchase of farm property and leases. As a special service to the community, students tested soils for area property owners. Through this service and others the department benefited S-M and the community.

A hasty homemaker impatiently stooped to retrieve seventy or eighty scattered pins which had spilled from her box. Some burned potatoes, or a scorched blouse—little trials such as these required a certain amount of patience, but the girls stood by, even though the angel-food cake fell and the custard was runny. Often getting into "mix-ups", cooking students could be found between a stove and sink doing anything from boiling water to canning apricots; from stewing prunes to whipping cream. Baking bread and cooking meat took the time of first year cooks, while second year girls learned the various cuts and grades of meat, discussed balanced meals, and then prepared one for a favorite teacher. Over in the sewing department, pinking and pinning material and stitching buttonholes formed the preliminaries. As the course grew tougher, girls assembled jig-saw puzzles by matching plaids and patterns; but from the third year classes came warm coats and formal dresses. Even Christmas gifts were made from felt and sequins. Other girls learned to create a happy home life regardless of the season of the year. Learning to set a formal dinner table, bathing a baby, washing dishes—it seemed almost real. Filled with creative ideas, the girls quickly caught on to selecting wallpaper, arranging pictures, and furnishing a small room to make it appear larger. Whether any one of the young ladies turned out to be Mrs. Homemaker of 1968 or the Mother of the Year is unknown, but every student received a valuable experience in homemaking.

The glare of welding torches . . . the metallic sounds of hammers and wrenches . . . the smells of fresh sawdust and crankcase oil. The industrial arts classes made their presence known in a variety of ways. Although English and citizenship students may have sometimes resented the noisy intrusions of electric saws and forges, these distrubances were necessary ingredients in learning the skills of wood and metal work. The accent in these classes was on the practical as members learned the mechanical arts necessary in running and maintaining the machines of an industrial nation. Woodworking classes found that patience and a steady hand could produce everything from bookends to table legs. Hammers, lathes, drills, sanders, and saws were only a few of the tools made available in S-M's well-equipped shops. Metalworking classes learned the skills of welding and forging a variety of alloys. In these classes, students were given the knowledge necessary as a prerequisite to auto mechanics, a two hour course which introduced its members to the intricacies of the modern auto. Repairing everything from clogged carburetors to dead batteries, students in auto mechanics gained experience by working on the cars of faculty and fellow students. Rounding out the vocational arts program were the classes in drafting, which prepared students for jobs in architecture and designing.

Could S-M's phys ed courses turn ninety-seven pound weaklings into muscle men? Whether such was possible or not, all boys participating in the athletic program could say they had accomplished a great deal under the supervision of Mr. Cox and Mr. Johnson. Spending ten or fifteen minutes on warmup excersises each day, the 750 boys found it hard to forget that S-M ranks high nation-wide as an enthusiastic advocate of physical fitness programs. The boys' gym calendar included such sports as soccer in the fall, basketball during cold months, and track in the spring. In 1957-58, the boys initiated a new obstacle course and also sampled various leisure activities through lectures on golf, bowling, and hunting. Meanwhile, on the other side of the school, 650 girls developed their skills and interests by playing basketball, hockey, and other old favorites. Teachers Miss Heinke and Mrs. Howard also introduced new games such as volley tennis. "On with the show" was the motto of the tumbling students as they gave gymnastic exhibitions for school assemblies. Both boys and girls appreciated the variety their gym classes gave to their daily academic schedules, as through group efforts each student developed a keen sense of cooperation and teamwork. Receiving both victories and defeats taught all participants that fair play and sportsmanship are of great value in life.

The Southwest Indians found themselves short of a medicine man this year as the flu caused the Missouri school to cancel its opener with S-M. The effects of this cancellation were extremely apparent during the first period of S-M's contest against the Topeka Trojans. The tribe was a victim of the first game jitters and before the team could get settled, they had spotted their intra-state rivals to a 14 point lead. Dave Butts sparked a second quarter drive which he ended on a 1 yard plunge for the touchdown. An off-side penalty cost S-M the extra point, and the teams took an intermission with a 14-6 tally. The second half was all S-M, but the only score was a 20 yard McCallister to Butts aerial which left the tribe lacking in the scoring column, 14-13. The loss was an aggravating one as S-M had a large statistical edge and outplayed the Trojans except for the first few minutes.

The tribe invaded the Argentine Ponies the following week; and, indeed, it was successful attack. Numerous Argentine mistakes, vicious blocking, and a flashy offense merged to constitute a relentless Indian attack. The S-M backs led by Nick Mills sprinted for four long touchdown runs of over 30 yards apiece. To add to the Pony worries, Larry McCallister was arching true passes and doing an excellent job of deception. This multi-offense plus a solid defense led by Larry Kastler united for a final score of S-M 33—Argentine 0.

The previously strong S-M offense, hampered by numerous injuries, was well contained by the Wyandotte Bulldogs as a 7-0 defeat gave the tribe a 1-2 season record. Ball control was the most obvious tribe failure as the Bulldogs took over possession five times via the fumble-pass interception route. The deepest penetration which the S-M eleven could offer was stopped at the Wyandotte 30. Wyandotte, using its all-state fullback, Gib Wilson, drove deep into Indian territory three times; moreover, only sheer determination stopped the Bulldogs from converting all three penetrations.

The tribe evened its record at 2 wins and 2 losses as the Westport Tigers were smashed 23-0 on the victor's field. A battering running game plus effective, although limited, passing were the keys to the powerful S-M offense. The loser's score plus a safety pointed out the S-M defensive work. Two sustained drive scoring marches and the safety gave the Indians a wide 16-0 gap at half-time. The second half was merely a formality as Westport was decidedly outclassed.

A mid-season flurry was climaxed as the Washington Wildcats were entirely demolished by a tally of 47-0. It was definitely the night in which everything S-M did was right; an event for which everyone had been waiting. Larry McCallister and Ronnie Turner, S-M's touchdown twins, were at their peaks as McCallister fired four touchdown passes to his favorite receiver. When McCallister wasn't throwing passes, he was intercepting them, making long runs, or throwing key blocks. Again, the S-M defense was stout and rose to every occasion. Mike Smith, the tribe's "toe," was 5 for 7 on conversions.

A 23-0 victory over the Leavenworth Pioneers gave S-M its third straight victory and a 4-2 season's record. After a scoreless first half, the big S-M offensive guns roared back and blasted the Pioneer host. Ronnie Turner was, again, an offensive standout while Carl Deane played a fine defensive game. After the tribe had forged to a 14-0 lead, Deane intercepted a pass and raced 84 yards to the Pioneer 1 foot line. A penalty pushed the Indians to the six where Mike Smith booted a field goal, a rare event in high school ball. The final tribe counter came on a 29 yard pass as the final gun sounded.

The flu caused Highland Park to cancel in favor of the highly ranked Wichita Kapaun Crusaders as the tribe's seventh foe. For keeping S-M's winning streak alive, the cancellation was a fatal mistake as the Crusaders picked off a 21-20 victory. It was a crushing defeat for the Indians as the game-deciding extra point hit the crossbar and fell back. Kapaun led all the way but never by more than one touchdown. McCallister turned in another great job at quarterback although he was favoring a bad leg. Nick Mills also had a good night, slashing for needed yardage on various occasions. Kapaun passed for all three extra points.

The opposition for the last game of the season was supplied by the Southwest Indians. Indeed, it proved to be what was probably the most exciting game in the history of Shawnee-Mission football. Southwest literally blasted S-M from one end of the field to the other and picked up a 30-6 lead at the end of the first quarter. S-M, however, displayed a never-say-die spirit and started its long journey home on a 24-yard McCallister to Turner pass. McCallister went over from the 1 as the first half ended, leaving S-M on the bottom of a 30-20 score. The second half witnessed the relentless Kansans again cutting the gap on a 3-yard plunge by Than Castle. The host finally took a 34-30 lead as Tim Bryan blocked a Southwest punt. Dick Keeney grabbed the loose ball and went in for the tally. However, Southwest came back to grab a 37-34 lead on a quick 7 pointer. Again, S-M rose to the occasion and Larry McCallister guided his charges calmly to a methodical winning tally and a 41-37 victory. Each team scored six touchdowns but S-M's Mike Smith spelled the difference, toeing 5 out of 6 conversions.

Thus, Shawnee-Mission under Coach Guy Barnes wrote another successful page in its football history. It was a determined team which was separated from an undefeated season by only 9 points. More important, however, this group learned that one is never defeated until he hears the final whistle.

At half time Penny Wheat, Laura Richmond, and Sue Sladek complete homecoming decorations with royal smiles.

A cold starry night finally brought the eleventh annual homecoming ceremony of Shawnee-Mission. After many months of hard work and planning, a period out of the past was recreated by Chip Elwell. Much like the genii from Aladdin's lamp, he and his committee made real the wish of all by transforming a hay wagon, chicken wire, and thousands of napkins into a lovely white French Provincial coach drawn by two red horses with white manes. Work for this night had been begun in the summer and the completion of the carriage, crowns, plumes, and thrones was not realized until the ceremony itself. At the half, Her Majesty Laura Richmond appeared before a cheering, excited crowd as queen, and was followed in the royal procession by two white Imperial convertibles carrying attendants Sue Sladek and Penny Wheat. As Harry Lindquist, Steven LaBerge, and Sky Lyon escorted the lovely threesome up to their red and white satin thrones, the band played the traditional coronation march, "Pomp and Circumstance." Shining smiles and eyes greeted the royalty as they proceeded to the thrones under an arch of white plumes held by Pep Club girls on each side of the white carpet. After receiving her crown and bouquet, Queen Laura reigned from the fifty-yard line for the second half of the game. It was a night out of the past long to be remembered.

roundballers jump off to fast start

As basketball season neared S-M's roundballers began their strenuous workouts to prepare for what was probably the toughest schedule in the state. The squad began its campaign against Argentine and they started with nothing short of a boom. Howard Parker ran around and through the Argentine defense to lead his hot shooting mates with 14 points. The tribe, looking fine in all departments, led throughout the game. The second victory of the fresh season was secured the next night as the Paseo Pirates were stunned, 48-43. Fine play by scrappy Howard Parker and excellent shooting by Jim Bryan was enough to sink the pressing Pirates, who made a game but futile comeback effort. The North Kansas City Hornets used S-M's coldness plus the effectiveness of their own Bill Kelso as weapons to sting the tribe 51-46. It was a full eight minutes before the Indians scored a field goal; and they quickly found themselves ten points down, a depth from which they never recovered. Scott Cochran and Jim Bryan paced the losers scoring. The tough Ward Cyclones ripped S-M's defense by hitting 51 per cent of their shots and with paralyzing rebounding. S-M's offense, led by Jim Bryan with 22 and Tim Bryan with 11, was not enough to match the Cyclones, who hustled to the 56-51 verdict. The S-M roundballers again climbed over the .500 mark as they ran over Highland Park 60-49. The Indians were plagued again by the bad start and were completely outrebounded. However, Earl Nicoli, Cochran and Parker took up the slack and balanced the tribe's attack. Newton's unbeaten Railroaders capitalized on S-M's traditional bad start and took a 39-36 victory. However, good scoring and floor play by Cochran and Parker left the winner in doubt until the end.

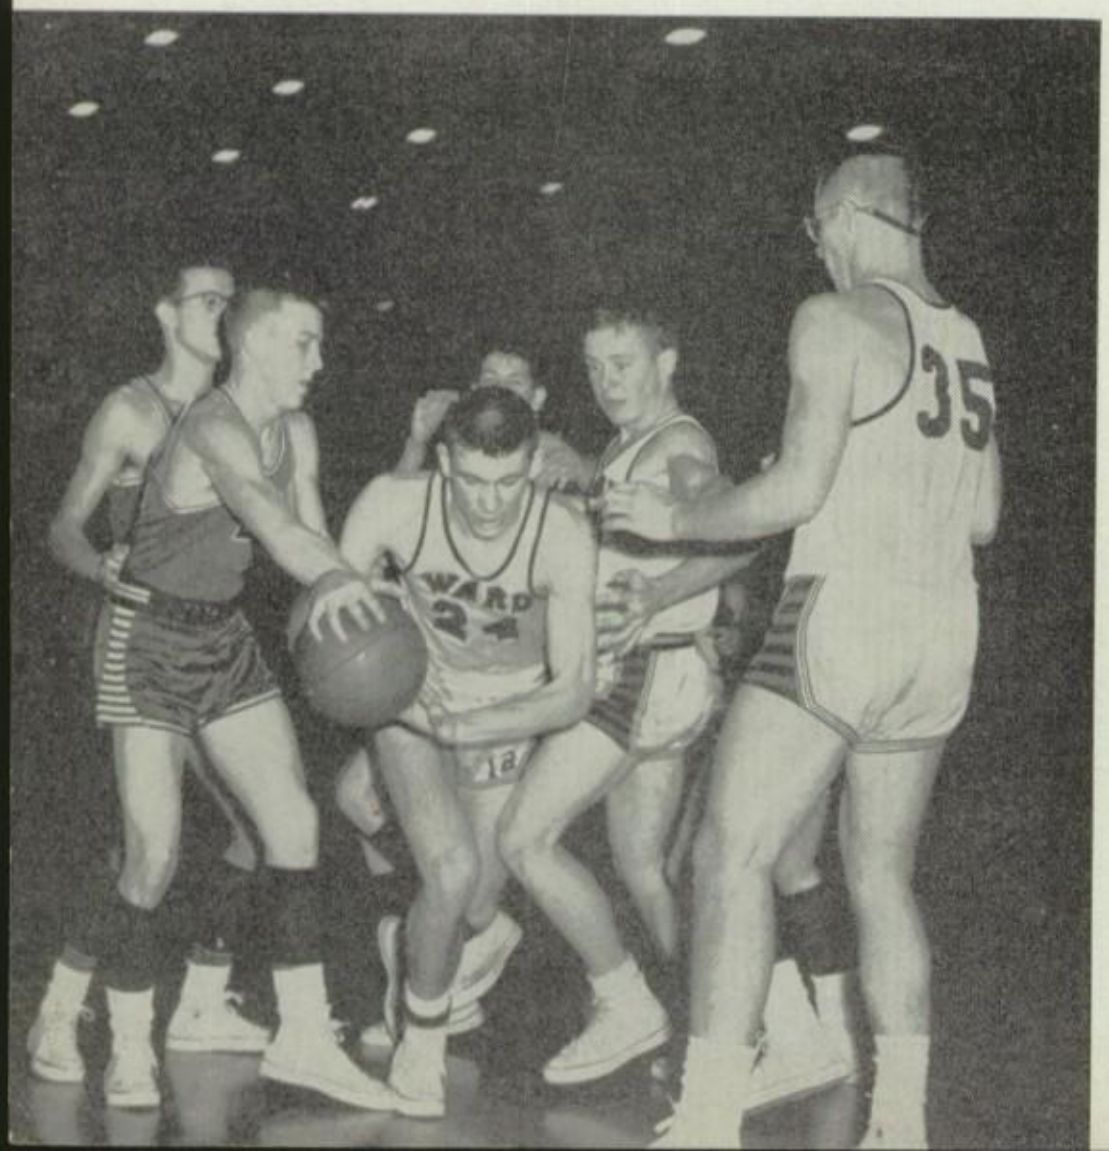
indians take second at dodge city

A Ward Cyclone springs loose under the S-M basket and drives through a host of tribesmen and teammates alike.



Having evened its record at 3-3, Shawnee-Mission invaded the domain of the high-ranking Topeka Trojans. The nervous start again jarred the Indians, who had to settle for a 69-59 defeat, although they narrowed the Trojan lead to three points near the end. Jim Bryan and Scott Cochran paced the S-M offense while Dick Keller did a fine job on the boards. The tribe opened up in every department against Argentine as they smothered the Ponies 65-34. The tables turned at the outset as for the first time it was the Indians who jumped off to a big lead. Parker, Keller, and Jim Bryan supplied the main tribe scoring punch. S-M's first Sunflower League victory was gained at the hands of the Washington Wildcats. A solid performance of rebounding, shooting, and defense by S-M outclassed the Wildcats 52-27. The Bryans supplied the necessary rebounding while Jim Bryan, Keller, and Parker added the offensive spark. Inman was the tribe's first opponent as the Indians began their Dodge City Tournament campaign. The Bryans and Cochran supplied the necessary goals as the Indians trounced their smaller foe, 57-33. The semi-finals witnessed S-M squeak by powerful Wichita East 61-59, as Larry McCallister scored a tip-in at the final buzzer. The S-Mites were ten points down at the half and needed a tremendous rally to prepare for McCallister's cincher. Ward grabbed a 13-1 lead early in the final game and never lost their lead. S-M, however, proved to be very game; and after trailing by ten with five minutes left, trailed only 59-58 as the buzzer sounded.

Shawnee-Mission met with calamity in the second meeting with Wyandotte. The Bulldogs led through the first half, but the fighting tribesmen came back to lead by three points at the end of the third quarter. The last quarter was a vicious contest, the tide of battle changing several times. When the final gun sounded, the score was tied. In the overtime Wyandotte outscored the Indians by six points for a final score of 41-35. The tribe made it two losses in a row when they were edged out by two points in their second game with Ward. Parker led the team in scoring by dropping in eight points, while Jim Bryan helped control the backboards for S-M. The Indians held a two-point lead at half time, but in the second half Ward scored forty-five to the tribe's forty-one points. In their next encounter the tribesmen were victorious over Topeka. The Trojans led in the hoopmaking during the first half. After intermission the Indians, with the help of Jim Bryan's seventeen points and fine rebounding, pulled ahead to finish with a 58 to 55 point lead. Leavenworth was the next rival to fall before the tribe. The Bryan twins did their share by grabbing eleven rebounds each. The Indians led all the way, changing their halftime lead of four points to eighteen at the end of the game.

narrow losses give fourth in regionals

Washington caught S-M on one of its "let down" nights, and the Wildcats really surprised the Indians, 34-30. The contest was tight all the way as both clubs had cold nights. Washington's control type of play rattled the tribe into numerous mistakes which offset the scoring of Jim Bryan and Carl Deane. Wyandotte and S-M met in a real thriller as the Indians completed their regular season. But as has been the case all too often in the past Wyandotte got the last thrill. Indian Parker put on a phenomenal exhibition of scoring and floor play to lead his fired-up mates to near victory over the number one Bulldogs. A missed lay-up by Larry McCallister with one second left sent the game into the extra session where the Bulldogs moved away 41-35. The tribesmen edged Sumner 46-41 in the first game of the regionals on the power of sparkling free-throwing and a resurgence during the final few minutes. Jim and Tim Bryan were the mainstays of the tribe offense and both maneuvered well under the boards. The bad start again jinxed the Indians and it was this original defeat which made the tribe comeback necessary. Ward was S-M's semi-final foe and the two teams by no means met as strangers. The tribe had previously played and lost to Ward three times and were up to end the Cyclone skein. The contest was unbelievably close all the way, as the score was knotted five times and the lead changed hands on ten occasions. The S-Mites, however, came out on the short end of a 41-37 tally despite the fine play of Parker and accurate team shooting. The anticlimatic third-place game was won 14-13 by Washington, who employed their famous ball-control game.

thinclads romp in big 7 indoor

The S-M track team under its new coach Arch Unruh began its season after a long period of grueling workouts at the Big Seven Indoor meet. The tribe literally ran wild at the meet and managed to completely outdistance their competitors. The state indoor was the tracksters' second endeavor; and they squeaked to a second place finish behind Wyandotte, a team the S-Mites had badly defeated the preceding week. Just to be sure of S-M superiority, a dual between Wyandotte and S-M was staged the next week. S-M not only got revenge, but they piled up one of the most one-sided victories in the school's history as they trampled the Bulldogs 83-49. The Ottawa relays was the next team event and once again S-M carried off everything but the field. The tribe tallied 62½ points, 20 better than runner-up Wyandotte. The Indians grabbed all four trophies at the meet as they won the three relays and the meet trophy. The Emporia relays, K.U. relays, S-M relays, Baker relays, Sunflower league meet, regional meet, and state meet were to follow for this obviously powerful unit. The young season had already witnessed some great individual performances. Co-captain Dave Butts had won every race in which he had been entered; Bob Martin and Jim Armstrong had looked good in the 880; Bill Haywood had tied the school record in the mile; Dom Mazza was looking great in the shot put; Turner had some great javelin throws; co-captain Phil Muntzel had done great in the 440 and had looked fine while teaming with Joe Bartels, Butts, and Jim Knight in the medley relay. Many school and meet records had also fallen to this team, while the medley relay team had set a record every time it had run. Thus a fine team looked confidently toward a state title.

Perfect form is displayed by Bill Strubbe as he vaults over the barrier during one of the year's outdoor contests.

The Indian cross-country team, always recognized as the hardest working group in the school, again had a fine season this year. The team began its workouts as school opened in September to prepare for its rugged nine meets. The schedule provided S-M with three dual meets, three invitationals, the Sunflower League meet, and the state meet. The harriers had the upper hand in two of the duals as they outdistanced Wyandotte and Olathe, while losing to Washington. S-M's Vic Neill took first in all three duals. The tribe took a first, second, and third in the invitationals, winning the S-M invitational, placing second at Emporia, and showing at the Haskell meet. The Sunflower League proved to be the most disastrous as the flu and other factors gave the Indians a third place. Haskell overpowered S-M in the regionals to carry away first place, but the tribe harriers blasted the rest of the opposition as they qualified second for the state meet. Vic Neill, Jim Wiltrout, Bob Martin, Joe Bartels, Ed Segrist, Jim May and Coach McGuire made the trip to the state meet. S-M finished fourth behind Wichita East, Haskell, and Washington, all excellent teams that had previously given us a tremendous amount of trouble. Thus, the S-M cross-country team, operating under its fine new coach, again proved itself to be one of the finest in the state as they maintained the high precedent established by S-M harriers in the past years.

The Japanese lanterns swayed in the April breeze. Beams from the flood lights reflected in the miniature pond. All the spectators at the annual Shawnee-Mission Relays waited expectantly to see who the queen would be. Suddenly three rickshas pulled by husky S-M "coolies" entered the track. Regally seated in their oriental carriages were Queen Mary Kay Hall and Attendants Sue Fredelake and Gail Parrish. Six Pep Club girls dressed in kimonos paid homage to the royal trio as they were escorted to their thrones upon a Japanese pagoda. After presenting the flowers and jeweled crowns to Mr. Welch who crowned the girls, the six queen finalists sat upon rocks in the garden. This garden was of oriental splendor with its gorgeous flowers, small lake, and eastern bridge. From the royal pagoda Mary Kay, Gail, and Sue watched the Indianettes drill and the track team put on a splendid performance. As the happy girls presented the lucky winners with medals and congratulations, it was evident that even the splendor and the magic of the Orient could not compete with the sparkles found in the lovely queens' eyes.

Many long workouts were executed as another of Shawnee-Mission's great spring sport trio prepared itself for a shot at a state title. Coach Glen Meredith, working in his initial year as mentor, had an unusually strong group of netsteers to pilot past their tough schedule. The squad was greatly solidified by returnees Steve Prosser, Larry Bresnick, Bob Bramson, Jack Thomas, Steve Reed, Maurice Smith, Jon Rice, and Dave Trowbridge, and bolstered by an influx of sophomores led by Benny Whitacre, John Anderson, and Lisle Hites. The team's first match was against Lawrence and the S-Mites whitewashed the Lions 5-0. Steve Prosser and Larry Bresnick managed singles victories while Jack Thomas and Bresnick, Steve Reed and Jon Rice, and Prosser and Bob Bramson notched doubles margins. The Lawrence racketeers managed only eight games and won no sets during the match. The season was also to witness duals against Olathe, Wyandotte, Southwest, Pem-Day, Topeka, and Highland Park, which were to be topped off by the league meet, followed by the regionals, and finally the state tournament. Considering the team's fine showing in its leadoff match, the excellent potential which the squad possessed, and the great play of this year's returnees in competition last year, Coach Meredith and the S-M rooters felt that they would look forward to many fine victories from the Indian tennis squadron.

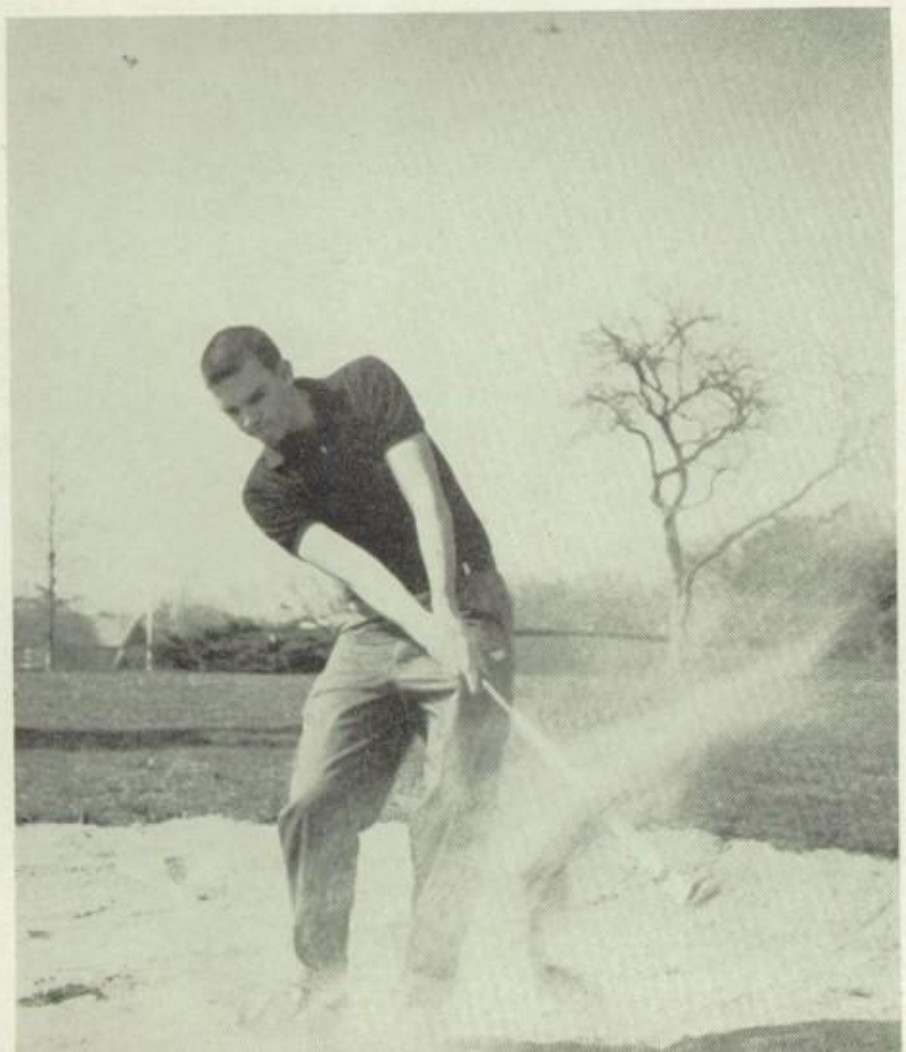
Bob Sayler and old enemy square off.



The golf team, as did its two sister spring sport teams, began practices under a new coach. Coach Saunders' charges, composed of a fine group of returning linksters and a great bunch of sophomores, began early practice rounds on Indian Hills, Quivera, and Milburn to prepare for a tough group of meets. John Ward, Larry Lewman, Howard Parker, Bob Sayler, Steve Chambers, Scott Cochran, Sky Lyon, and Bob Mann returned from last year's state championship squad, while Bill Sechrest, John Des Jardins, and Ted Newell supplied the punch for the sophomores. The squad headed toward Wichita for its first tournament. The four-man team tied for tenth at the 18-team meet, while the two-man team, paced by S-M's low shooter John Ward, tied for fifth. The squad showed tremendous improvement in its next outing as it walked away with honors at the Swope Park Invitational, a twelve-school tournament. Bill Sechrest was medalist for the contest with a 76, while John Ward was close behind with a 77. The tribe's closest competition was a distant eighteen strokes back. The Salina tournament, the S-M Invitational, the Sunflower League meet, the Regional Tournament, the State Tournament, plus a few duals and triangles rounded out the S-M linkster's schedule. The squad, thus, looked like one capable of following the precedent of six successive state titles.

swimmers win three duals

The tribe swimming team, although operating for only the second year, had another excellent season. The tanksters began workouts at the Kansas City Athletic Club well before the season opened and managed to fit in three practices a week. The squad, which began its competition without sufficient experience or a home pool, traveled to Topeka for its first encounter. Good team balance paved the way for a tie with the Trojans. Wyandotte provided S-M's next opposition, and the Bulldog team proved to be too formidable. A two-match trip to Wichita was the swimmer's next activity. Wichita North overcame the S-Mites in the first, while a great S-M effort blasted Wichita Southeast. S-M evened its season's record during the next meet, as Wentworth was completely outclassed. Coach Jerry Wilhm's charges moved on to the Sunflower League meet where they managed a third place berth. Topeka defeated the tribe in the last dual of the season as both squads prepared for the state meet. Gordon Fluke, Bob Simpson, and Karl Pfuetze led Shawnee-Mission's scoring at the state tournament as the team picked off eighth place. Co-captains Pfuetze and Steve Chambers both had excellent years. Pfuetze was undefeated in the breast stroke until the state meet, and Chambers fared well in diving and the backstroke. Other squad members that excelled throughout the year's action were Cole Phillips and Keith Bras in diving, Gordon Fluke in the free style, and Bob Simpson in the individual medley. Coach Wilhm and most of the Shawnee-Mission pepsters felt extremely pleased and encouraged with the team's showing, especially considering the team's disadvantages.

A heap big smoke and a heap big fire, would ably sum up the year of the Shawnee-Mission Pep Club. The student executive committee and the Pep Club sponsors transmitted smoke signals through announcements over the public address system, posters, rallies, the wearing of ceremonial gowns, and "Every man an Indian . . ." echoing in the S-M corridors. Often off the reservation, Indian pepsters traveled via chartered bus to boost their team. The Pep Club executive committee sported a genuine eagle eye which scrutinized uniforms, checked roll, and recognized willing customers in the stands who were eager for items sold by the Pep Club when it was their assignment to sell concessions. Eighteen hundred members went into Pep assemblies and their interest in sports events became kindled by speakers, skits, and shouts. As game time drew near, the S-M field or gymnasium quickly filled with a burst of red jackets and a warm glow of smiles as many optimistic pepsters crowded the stands. An exceptionally vivacious Pep Club member received a pepster award each week. Under the competent leadership of Steve LaBerge and Mr. Allen Welch, Pep Clubbers had a laughing, long remembered, and very loud year. No material profits were realized by the Shawnee-Mission Indians except a lasting pride and pleasure in the Pep Club.

Like catalysts which speed up reactions in science, so were the S-M cheerleaders to the Pep Club. Without them there would have been cheering and spirit, but with them there was great enthusiasm and pep, and the reaction seemed at times ready to explode because it was so intense.

After a gap of six years, two boys again invaded the varsity line of cheering girls. This caused subtle revisions of many of the cheers, but the over-all effect was admirable. Laura Richmond was the leader of the varsity pep boosters, and the varsity-in-training "B" squad cheerleaders were guided by Kenna Barnes. With thanks to these cheerers, many incidents will be remembered after this year. The cheerleaders remember the great excitement and enthusiasm during the games, the fun of getting together for dinners and working on assemblies, and other tasks; such as industriously washing, ironing, pressing and polishing outfits on Thursday night. The students too recall highlights of the year, especially the skits in pep assemblies. The clever and catchy jazz skit for the Argentine game was typical of the fine quality of the work of the cheerleaders.

entire nation knows s-m congress

Like another President, Harry Lindquist gives his weekly fireside chat—the executive committee report.

DICK HARPER

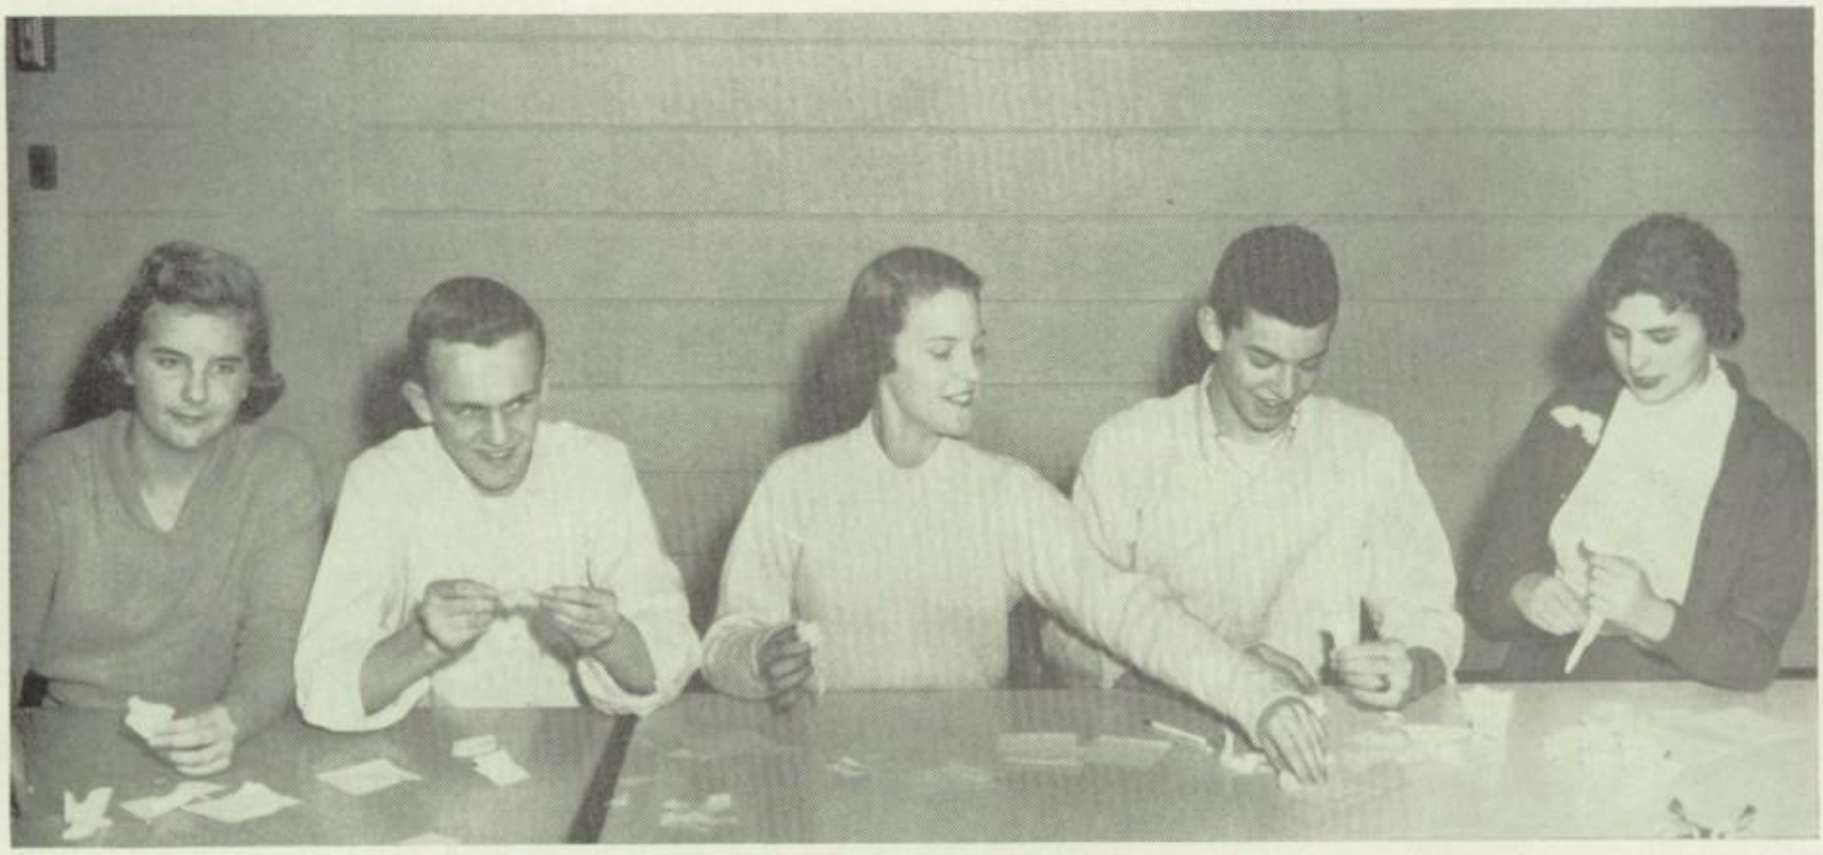
The phone rang and a man answered. "Hello, Will Rogers High School? This is Harry Lindquist." This was a voice heard not only in Tulsa, but in Dallas and Oklahoma City. Shawnee-Mission's student body president called often to make arrangements for the first student exchange program held between S-M and other American schools. Calls were also placed to Topeka, Jefferson City, and Washington as speakers for the April safety conference were contacted. Congress was also busy securing homes for delegates and planning for a special summer workshop for S-M and other area schools.

In addition to such "outside" activities as these, many problems were solved in Congress. While Phil Muntzel, chairman, kept order, the other student body officers—Sky Lyon, vice-president; Sandra Slough, secretary; and Dick Harper, treasurer—pushed new election rules, the first budget in the history of Congress, constitutional amendments for initiative and referendum, and motions pertaining to the separation of S-M. Yet another project of the legislative body was registering all cars in school. This step made sure that only students parked in the student lots and gave a boost to school spirit, as did a special all-student committee.



Fun for the feeble-minded? No, just Judy Hart, Bill Schaefer, Marty Leith, Alan Parker, and Cheryl Barnett making roses for the band.

cars, crepe paper, and charters

More than one-hundred clubs were the responsibility of the Charters and Regulations Committee as they sought to renew charters of older clubs and charter the new ones. This committee also took a major part in organizing the club system for Shawnee-Mission East by taking surveys to find where the most club interest was held. The entire sophomore class made up the membership of the Safety Committee under the supervision of the executive board. Although it was the first year for the committee, a great deal was accomplished. These enthusiastic sophomores undertook various campaigns including windshield washing and car checking. A national youth safety convention, consisting of 3500 delegates, was held by S-M in April as "safety first" became the watchword.

The hard-working Social Committee was in charge of arranging a school dance every month. Charging through crepe paper strings and developing jitters from cat walks became arts to these committee members. Many long hours were spent collecting squaw dresses, finding weather balloons, and contacting orchestras. This committee accomplished much in fulfilling the students' wishes. The Assemblies and Activities Committee was responsible for choosing the acts and putting together the class talent assemblies. Working with the administration, they helped to decide the events of the annual Fun Day and to keep them well organized.

Although most students "strolled" around the gym at dances, Student Congress members, appointed by the Election-Service Committee, became ticket-takers and coke-vendors. This same committee was also responsible for printing ballots, checking petitions and poster space, and tallying votes, thus insuring successful class, student body, and Homecoming elections. Believing that more students should participate in competitive sports, the Intramural Committee sponsored a full schedule of activities ranging from ping pong to soccer. "S-M slenderella" trimmed the waistlines of the fairer sex while baseball or football occupied the boys. A good time was had by all while they relaxed their minds and developed their muscles.

Choosing the citizen of the month, planning the Honors and Awards assemblies, and sweeping bugs out of trophy cases were jobs of the Improvement-Relations Committee. Producing the indispensable student directory was their most important task. Their long hours of matching names and addresses were well rewarded when everyone bought their directories—one for the car and one for the telephone table. Searchers for a long-lost fountain pen headed for a small room next to the north cafeteria. The Lost and Found Committee, which manned this room during all hours of the day, accomplished its purpose by returning all misplaced items to the happy owners.

rhythm and romance

Sophomores searching for new friends attended the first mixer, staged to give them an opportunity to get acquainted. Although jammed to the rooftops, the gym still managed to hold hundreds of bopping S-Mites. The Indian Hop was the first all-school dance, and this called for the familiar casual dress. The huge tepee under the clock set the scene, with many Indian dresses hanging from the ceiling as the background. October brought the glamorous Homecoming Dance, which was as popular as ever. The radiant queen and her two attendants graced the intermission with their royal entrance and crowning, and afterward performed a lovely waltz. The turnabout WPA dance followed; and this, as always, attracted a large attendance. On that night, instead of the usual Putsch's or Breton's preceding or succeeding the affair, it was usually a "Come on over to my house for hamburgers!" from the girls. December was remembered for its beautiful Christmas Formal, with its stars, snow flakes, bells, and the perennial Santa Claus with his humorous gifts. The town was blasted with the arrival of the Big Beats in January, and their rhythmic and hilarious music-making pulled in the largest attendance of the year, with everyone having fun. To assist in earning money for AFS, a dance with the theme of "Around the World in 80 Days" was given in February. One mammoth passenger baloon swayed from the ceiling, with smaller ones surrounding it. The Y-Teen's dance with its "Carousel" setting was once again a switch-over, and it was followed by the April semi-formal. The Senior Farewell Dance, or Spring Formal, ended the year with a final fling.

At a school dance the old familiar question is asked again: "What'll you have?"

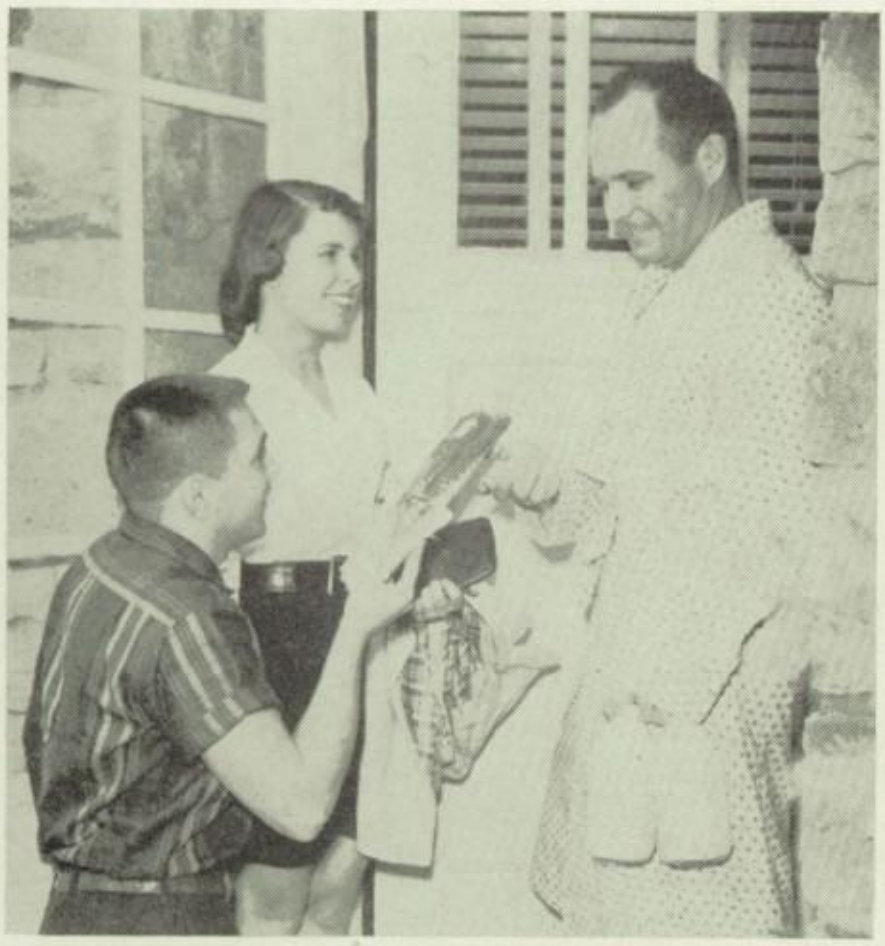
heaven on earth for s-m

Even though many persons search for an ethereal place on earth and cannot find it, Shawnee-Mission students who attended the Junior-Senior Prom glided through the gym doors and found themselves in the midst of Paradise. Deft hands transformed paper mache, paint, glue, wire, and crepe paper into heavenly magnificence, using pale blue and green as the prevalent hues with colorful flowers and vines adding spice. Billowing formals swirled around a celestial tropical garden, the center of which was a tremendous column. Murals along the walls were bedecked with flowers and vines, and trees draped with Spanish moss were placed around the floor. Arrangements for a good band, refreshments, and the sending of invitations occupied the center of attentions for committees of the hardworking juniors trying to make the Prom the best. Sophomores served as waiters and prepared the ambrosia, getting a sample of the night that was in store for them next year. May third found the S-M Paradise bustling with happiness and surprise as juniors and seniors marveled at the decorations, refreshments, and band. Blue and green lights next to the stage set off the band which proved heavenly enough to match the decore set for the evening. The junior class through hours of planning, preparing, and finally presenting, hosted the 1958 Prom in a celestial tribute to the senior class.

"We might as well break our diets just once," agree Sue Sladek and Linda Bartley as Bill Kaufman and Bob Miller scan the prices.



"I hope you didn't wait up for me," says Kenna Barnes when she returns from a long night at the Prom with Chuck Frankenfeld.

From the sidelines Donna Barton and Scott Wilson watch S-M's reaction to a Prom night in paradise.

a successful mission

The problem of publishing over 175 pages of newspaper fell to the seventy-two members of the two Mission staffs. Headed by Curtis Wells and Tom Wagner, first and second semester editors respectively, the paper covered news from all phases of school life: the band's trip to the Rose Bowl, the state debate tournament, all athletic events, and items from S-M clubs. To each staff fell the task of publishing several eight-page issues and a special edition (the Christmas edition in the first semester and the yearly picture edition in the second semester) besides the usual weekly six-page issues. Among the problems met by the staffs were the periodic trips to the printer and the engraver, the re-folding of 3,000 copies when the printer had mis-folded them, and the pacification of the seventy advertisers from all parts of the community. Feature articles spotlighted interesting students, special holidays, and unusual organizations. The weekly editorials discussed fund drives, Student Congress projects, and other topics of interest to S-Mites. Each week, the staff wrote items averaging 450 inches long, one column wide. Photographs, a necessity for a newspaper, were often included. The Mission sponsor, G. O. "Doc" Watson, not only assisted in the editing of the paper, but also coached journalistic newcomers for positions on next year's staff. Through their work on the paper, journalism students gained experience which would be of use to them in any field they should choose.

Four . . . three . . . two . . . one . . . zero . . . . Up into space went S-M's first satellite, Naidni. At the launching station, members of the 1958 Indian staff ran up and down the bus dock stairs cheering and shouting. In a few moments faint beep-beep-beeps could be heard cautioning all potential yearbook purchasers that prices would soon be going up on the biggest annual in school history. Two months passed, in which time salesmen peddled their "ware" in the halls, filled out little yellow receipts, and exchanged money for memories of classmates and teachers, of football games and dances, of the operetta, of class elections. Behind the scenes forty-three inspired students devoted an hour and more a day to producing a best seller edition full of excitement, realism, and people. Photographers scurried about, clicking cameras and developing rolls of film. Artists worked carefully to brighten the pages, and clever writers erased again and again after putting their imaginations down on paper. Members of the business staff calculated and contemplated the funds which poured in from club organizations and community advertisers. A new letter-press process was introduced enabling clearer reproduction of pictures. In October journalistic aspirants conferred at K.U.; and in March the Quill and Scroll initiates met. It was a memorable day when the staff realized that they had finished putting the character and personality of Shawnee-Mission between the covers of a memory, the 1958 Indian.

laughing and learning through assemblies

Steve Schermerhorn adjusts the house-lights as Scott Wilson and Bill Sell anxiously await their grand entrance onto the stage.

"Hurry everyone—you have only two more weeks to prepare your act for the forthcoming talent assembly." This announcement was heard by Shawnee-Mission students several times during the year as the Assemblies and Activities Committee prepared an engrossing talent assembly. Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays found each class in the auditorium at one o'clock to enjoy an entertaining or educational program. Occasionally the entire school gathered in the boys' gym for a special presentation such as Sergeant Charles Pike's Safety and Magic Show. Many students enjoyed the music of the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra.

A great majority of the programs, however, were produced by the students themselves. The vocal and instrumental music department entertained often. Both the girls' and the boys' physical education classes performed, adding to the student participation. The exchange students' addresses, French and Spanish assemblies, "West Side Story", inumerable campaign speeches by hopeful candidates, and a debate completed the year's programs and activities during the assembly hour. As all Indians readily agreed, the minutes from one to one-forty on assembly days were indeed pleasant ones.

A trig class practicing Italian phrases . . . a glimpse of a gay Norwegian sweater . . . two hundred S-Mites awaiting the airplane of their world-traveling classmates . . . the smiles and tears of four elated juniors—these scenes equalled AFS. Shawnee-Mission truly extended a hand of friendship through its American Field Service exchange students. Ellen Larssen from her island home above the Arctic Circle and Pietro Cappelletti from sunny Italy were the foreign students who spent the year at S-M. Through assembly speeches, homeroom talks, and classroom contacts, they explained European customs while they began to understand the American way of life. In summer the high school's American ambassadors gathered their cameras, drip-dry clothes, pills for seasickness, and writing paper and then crossed the ocean to represent the United States and Shawnee-Mission in a foreign land. A February campaign was launched by the AFS Committee of the Student Congress to earn funds for next year's foreign students. Shares sold at fifty cents apiece, chili served before the Wyandotte basketball game, and a dance whisking students to "far away places" were some of the methods used by the committee to reach their goal. A share with a foreign flag proudly worn on a sweater proved that S-M worked for peace through AFS.

"Transplanted Europeans", Ellen Larssen and Pietro Cappelletti are apparently enjoying their year as Shawnee-Mission Indians.

The 157 students sat down at the tables, and the annual picnic of the National Honor Society had begun. Traditionally held at the home of one of the members, the supper climaxed the year's activities of the group. The first event was the election of the four officers: Ronie Schwiesow, president; Kendall Bailes, vice president; Connie Cristler, secretary; and Fred Jones, treasurer. Tests for the N.H.S. scholarships were given to four finalists in the middle of March. Perhaps the best-known activity of the society, the yearly assembly was held in April under the direction of Miss Seaton, Miss Boys, and Mr. Clements, the three sponsors of the group. The thirty-nine remaining members of last year's group went into the audience for the seventy-four seniors and forty-four juniors who had been chosen by the faculty members on the basis of their scholarship, leadership, character, and service to the school and community. Accompanying this nomination was the coveted congratulatory letter from Mr. Welch to parents of the lucky N.H.S.'ers. Later, this group, comprising five per cent of the junior class and ten per cent of the senior class, was welcomed into the society in the traditional initiation service. Following speeches on the four tenets of membership, each new initiate lighted a candle and walked out into the auditorium as a student highly honored and respected both by his classmates and his teachers.

The candles of Truth, Initiative, Opportunity, Leadership, Loyalty, Enlightenment, and Friendship were lit as the annual initiation for Quill and Scroll began. Together with Lawrence and Topeka High Schools, sixty-five honored students from Shawnee-Mission traveled to the campus of the University of Kansas to be received as members. For the first time, a group of S-M seniors active in school affairs was selected to conduct the initiation ceremony. Each member of this group, representing a virtue of good journalism, lit a candle and joined with the others to create a combined flame. The initiates were each given a small taper which they lit from this flame of journalistic endeavor. Forming a large circle around the room, the newly inducted members received the gold pin of Quill and Scroll, the fruit of many hours of work on the business, editorial, art, or photographic staffs of the Mission and the Indian. The gold quill and scroll of the society, standing not only for journalistic accomplishment but high scholarship as well, was worn with pride by all members. With the room enveloped in candle light, the members closed the ceremony with a pledge: "I do pledge myself to do all in my power to work for the advancement of my community, to be loyal to my superiors, to live up to the ideals of journalism."

Caesar again invaded S-M: not as a study in sophomore English, but as the subject of the twelfth annual Cavalcade of the instrumental music department. The band's overture helped the audience to find the mood and settle themselves, in order to assimilate the memorable production. The noble Caesar, returning from his wars in Sputnik, was honored by spectacular festivities in his honor. The action then carried the audience to the market place. A variety of dance, instrumental, and vocal numbers plus a magic act quite ingeniously fitted into the script and occupied the attentions of the audience. Amidst all the gaiety, the Ides of March approached quickly as Caesar met his inevitable end at the Senate meeting. Later the senators decided it was well past time for Rome to be blessed with a night club: about one week after the death of Caesar the engrossed audience witnessed a modernistic pace in the action as they saw the new Roman night club. After the sun went down, spirits went up as the senators with ivy-league buckles on their slacks enjoyed the merriments of a twentieth century-type evening in Rome. The chorus line climaxed the evening with glamour and precision. Once again S-M proved that student talent and student production was well able to cope with the problem of producing another enjoyable and superb Cavalcade, adding notable highlights to the year.

five plays: an action-packed series

Trapped! Unless someone would dare to risk his own life in order to save five others, a wrecked submarine would become the casket of a panicky crew in no time at all. A lover, a dreamer, a coward, a cockney, a bully—who would be the one? Tragedy marked the lives of the "Submerged" crew in a desperate and dramatic scene. This was the first of five one-act plays produced in order to give more of these polished actors and actresses the chance to prove themselves. Due to a shortage in classroom space less scenery could be maintained; therefore smaller sets were used. Reluctant to accept the fact that her daughter could give a "Brilliant Performance," Linda Leslie, an actress herself, struggled to retain her own reputation as a Broadway starlet. This forty-minute drama was also presented during class assemblies. Evil and treachery were used by an old sea captain, Jason Harridew, who was obsessed by want of money. "The Singapore Spider" was brought to him as a gift of death in payment for his sinister deeds. A real thriller was presented in "Early Frost." A gloomy attic scene provided atmosphere for an attempted murder upon a young child who revealed her mentally disturbed aunt's secret. And again the scene changed, this time to the living room of David Lawrence, concert violinist, who injured his hand permanently in an accident. Attempts by his son to console his father in his bitterness resulted in inspiration.

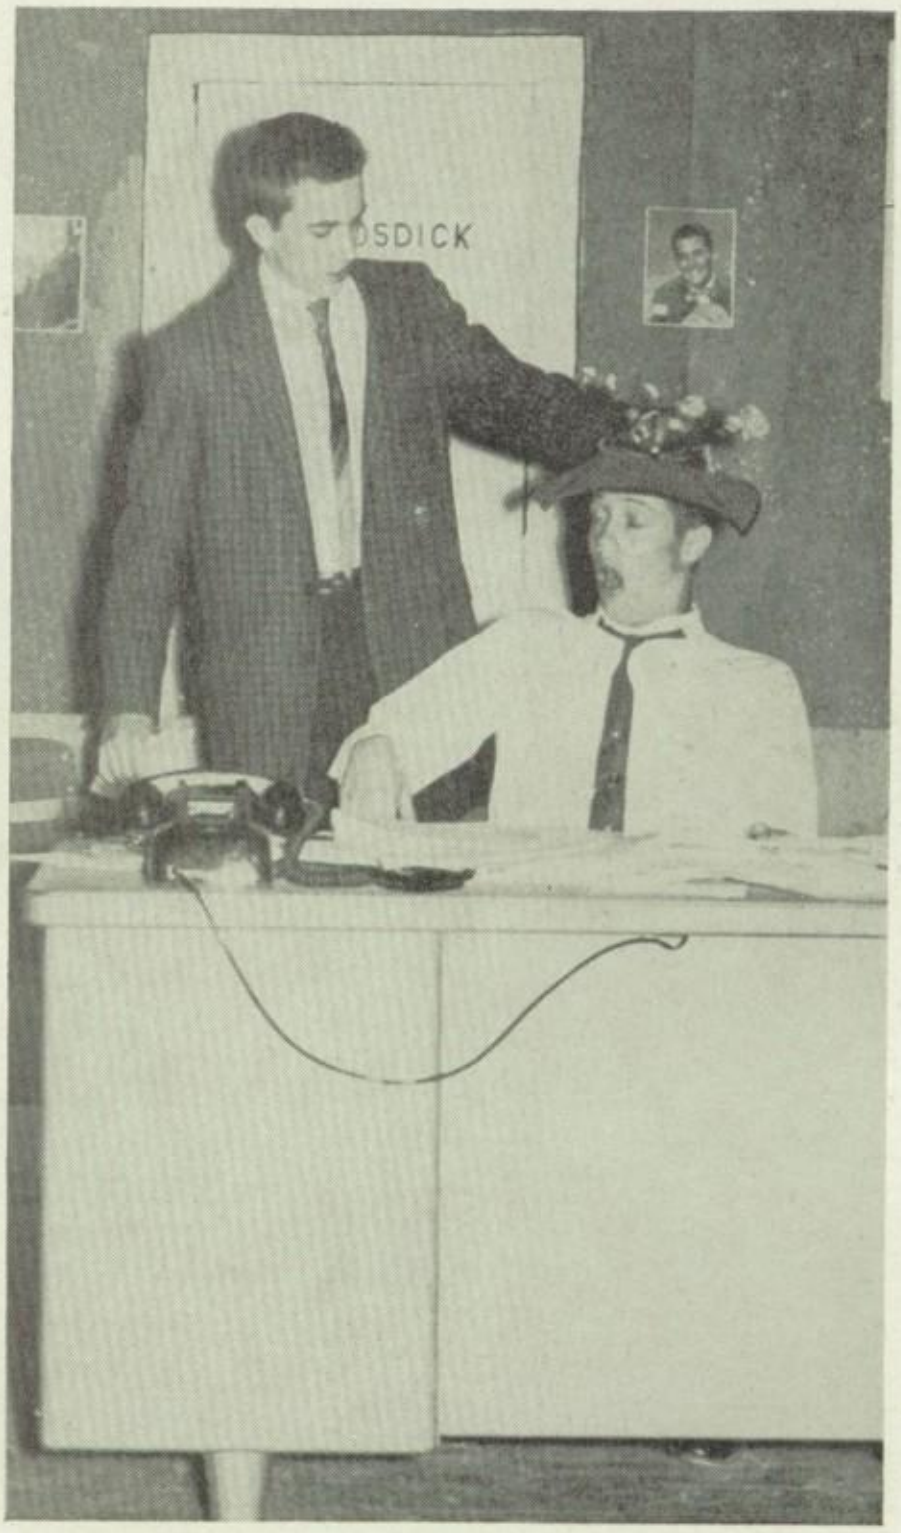
In the climax of "Early Frost", Connie Mallen as Lydia begs Pam Alston as Alice to free her long-imprisoned spirit.

Tension skyrockets as members of the "Submerged" crew wrestle with their consciences to decide who will give his life for the others.

dear aunt phoebe, . . .

Phoebe Goodhart, comforter of the troubled and counselor in matters of the heart, solved any entertainment problems the S-Mites might have had March 28th or 29th. The lively production "Dear Phoebe", filled with love letters, sports scandals, and mysterious murders, highlighted the spring activities of the drama department. "Teasers" in the Pep Club assembly, love letters in the classrooms, posters in the halls, and the appearances at the Jr. Highs advertised this production. Along with plenty of publicity went painting, production, direction, and weeks of nightly rehearsing that fitted together to make two highly humorous and successful evenings. The comedy "Dear Phoebe" centered around Bill Hastings who sought a job on the Daily Star and suddenly found himself in the role of Aunt Phoebe repairing broken hearts by answering letters of the lovelorn. Within a week Bill was captivated by Mickey Riley, the sportswoman in the next office. Mickey, investigating a "fixed" basketball game, involved Bill and herself in a murder. Hiding the body in the editor's office until they knew the identity of the murderer brought about some amusing results. When the whole thing was cleared up, Bill found himself editor and for a short time minus a Phoebe Goodhart. However, this situation was soon remedied. Suspense, mystery and the humorous antics of the characters kept things moving quickly and ended the play on a happy note.

Fearless G. R. Fosdick says, "I now dub thee Aunt Phoebe, comforter of the troubled, counselor in matters of the heart."



It would seem that gossip editor, Pat Smith, is about to form her own good gossip material with "Aunt Phoebe", Ron Schwiesow!

"They even built a skyscraper seven stories high!" Gary Alexander extolls the wonders of Kansas City for the Oklahomans.

All three night performances—completely sold out! Broadway and Hollywood combined could not have equaled the excitement felt by the cast of Oklahoma! at this news. Two months before, these 150 showmen were typical twentieth century S-M students, complete with Ivy League clothes and hair styles, but their appearances soon changed. Weeks of learning lines, sewing costumes, and avoiding barbers produced a troupe of calico clad, curly-headed homesteaders and cowmen to a total audience of 3750 operetta fans. The success of the show was not achieved without the student Theater Orchestra, which rehearsed nightly with the chorus and soloists to produce a hi-fi effect. As scenes were blocked and character parts were perfected, paint-spattered laborers designed and built scenes of Oklahoma farmyards and wheat fields. Property hands collected six-guns and worked hard to produce a "Surrey with the Fringe on Top," while the dancers swirled their way through rousing frontier dances or the spectacular dream ballet. The result: an excellent performance that attracted wide-spread interest. As Aunt Eller and other frontier settlers watched, the charming story of Laurey and Curly unfolded, Will Parker "hooked" Ado Annie, and Ali Hakim and Jud met their respective destinies. As the final curtain descended, all members of the captivated audience agreed, "Oklahoma—okay!"

The Thespian troupe could have turned the story of Goldilocks and the three bears into a suspenseful mystery through their combined experiences in acting, student directing, and working behind the scenes. Excellence in the dramatic arts qualified students for membership; outstanding character, scholarship, and energy were prerequisites. The title Thespian represented one-hundred hours of exceptional work, whether it was by controlling the light panel or applying make-up; outside projects also contributed points. Work in connection with either the five one-act plays or with "Dear Phoebe" gave many students the opportunity to achieve their goal. Weeks spent staying after until six o'clock, going over lines again and again, and perfecting certain gestures were rewarded by the applause of opening night and the realization of a job well done. On Tuesdays, during activity period, members of Troupe 413 made plans for the fall and spring initiations of new members. A trip to the School for the Blind thrilled young children's hearts when several Thespians related Christmas stories. In order to give more people a chance to become members of this National Thespian Society, five one-act plays were presented, and a double cast was used in the comedy, "Dear Phoebe."

Jim Fifield, Bob Sayler, Mr. Swanson, Harry Lindquist, and Phil Muntzel beam as brightly as their state championship trophy.

Resolved: That direct United States economic aid to individual countries should be limited to technical assistance and disaster relief. Arguing this year's proposition took the Shawnee-Mission debate squad to tournaments all over Kansas. Affirmative speakers used the classic examples of our building flour mills in China and sending ice boxes to Alaska to prove their point, while the negative side attempted to justify the policies of Uncle Sam. By either convincing or confusing the judges, the debators did win an impressive number of trophies. Victories at Hutchinson, Pittsburg, Russell, Topeka, Salina, Rosedale, and Washington helped give the squad the best record in the school's history. Winning second place in the regionals allowed Jim Fifield, Harry Lindquist, Phil Muntzel, and Bob Sayler to go to the state tournament. There the boys debated until they were hoarse and until they won the first place trophy. The S-M tournament was the biggest and best event of the year for the debators. Aided by their coach Mr. Maurice Swanson, they did all of the work. Although it often seemed they would never find enough timekeepers and judges or get the schedule to work out, the tournament turned out to be another triumph for S-M's "wordy" students—the debaters.

Shawnee-Mission's Ciceros, Patrick Henrys, and Edmund Burkes banded together in the National Forensic League. This honorary society was comprised almost entirely of debaters, but any ambitious student who ammassed the required twenty-five points by public speaking was eligible to join. These twenty five points enabled one to receive the Degree of Merit. Next on the NFL ladder came the Degree of Honor for seventy-five points, then Degree of Excellence for one hundred and fifty points, and finally the Degree of Distinction for those who had earned the total of two hundred and fifty points. Early in the fall they elected their officers—Jim Fifield, president; Bob Sayler, vice-president; and Zoe Ann Cole, secretary-treasurer—whose main job was seeing that the Shawnee-Mission debate tournament ran smoothly. Two special events occurred this year that meant much to the members of NFL. Points accumulated through several years produced a tangible reward for all S-M speakers. They received the award for having the leading NFL chapter in Kansas. Then in the spring Wyandotte was host at a joint banquet for League members of both the schools. There, new members were initiated, awards were presented, and good time was had as they ended another year of accomplishment in speaking.

". . . first letter varsity," was familiar to everyone during the Honors and Awards assemblies as boys received their well-earned "S" in the various sports. Each letter represented much hard work and team spirit helping to bring recognition to Shawnee-Mission through fair play. It was the Letterman's Club which joined the outstanding sportsmen of the six different sports making it possible for them to get to know each other better. But these lettermen did more than just participate in athletic events. They worked together in maintaining the high ideals of good sportsmanship set up by the organization. During the various seasons, white spots—these being the well-known sweaters of the letterman—could be seen scattered throughout the Pep Club cheering their fellow teams on to victory or selling concessions and seats. With the money earned through these projects, the lettermen were able to present their traditional banquet, picnic, and initiation at the close of the year. President Tim Bryan; Vice-president Vic Neill; Secretary Jim Fifield; and Treasurer John Ward were all responsible for providing interesting guest speakers and films each Tuesday during activity period. As sponsor of the group, Coach Bob Johnson helped them to reach their goals by giving them his counseling. Good sportsmanship and teamwork made the big red "S" a mark of distinction.

All the foreign-minded culture seekers at S-M banded together to present and/or attend the numerous dinners and programs given by the Latin, Spanish, and French Departments. The all-important production of the Latin Department and its Club was their banquet, which was staged for all the Patricians and even some Plebians. Many pseudo Romans attended the magnificent feast, and the toga-robed diners were presided over by the splendid gods and goddesses, while Jupiter and Juno reigned supreme. With Pink Elephants (of 7-Up) to drink, and slaves to work, the imitation ancients enjoyed their evening.

After the annual Spanish picnic, the fortunate sophomores were presented with the Spanish Assembly, in which the dilemma of misunderstandings between languages proved to be hilarious. Following this, the Pan-American Dinner was given April 15th by and for the Spanish students. The feast was a celebration of Pan-American Day, April 14th, and correlated speeches and skits were presented. To add to the festive mood, the dining tables were festooned with many colors of American countries.

The renowned French Assembly was given for all three classes in April; and, as usual, was a success. The setting was an Algerian cafe; and the plot, the murder of the premier. The premier was eventually killed, but only after some memorable acts were presented, and an unforgettable array of sacks and balloons were displayed by charming Frenchie girls.

The Latin banquet brings a touch of ancient Rome to S-M, and Glenray Cramer, Jerry Hurd, Bob Jones, and Judy Gunn do as the Romans do.

clubs: hub of s-m activities

After one o'clock on any Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday afternoon, a certain busy silence settled through the halls and corridors of Shawnee-Mission. During these three days more than one hundred clubs participated in a variety of activities which encompassed the interests of a large part of the student body. For the scientifically minded there were many groups including such subjects as math, anthropology, and ecology. The Travel Clubs reflected S-M's interest in far away places, while the Latin, Spanish, and French Clubs helped to recreate the atmosphere of foreign lands by aiding in the planning of banquets and assemblies. In contrast, two different moods in melody were sampled by the Classical Music Clubs and the Modern Jazz Club as they spent the periods listening to their favorite form of music. The newly organized German Club practicing their umlauts, the Rock Hounds analyzing the mineral content of a specimen, the Medical Club injecting white rats, or the Great Books Club discussing the fine points of a classic novel would give sufficient evidence of the worth of S-M's club program. Many clubs did not confine their activities to a short weekly meeting but organized field trips or held contests and tournaments. Some members even found themselves doing homework for clubs which were organized to include subjects that were not in the curriculum. The responsibility for programs rested on the members themselves, and they successfully responded to this challenge for leadership.

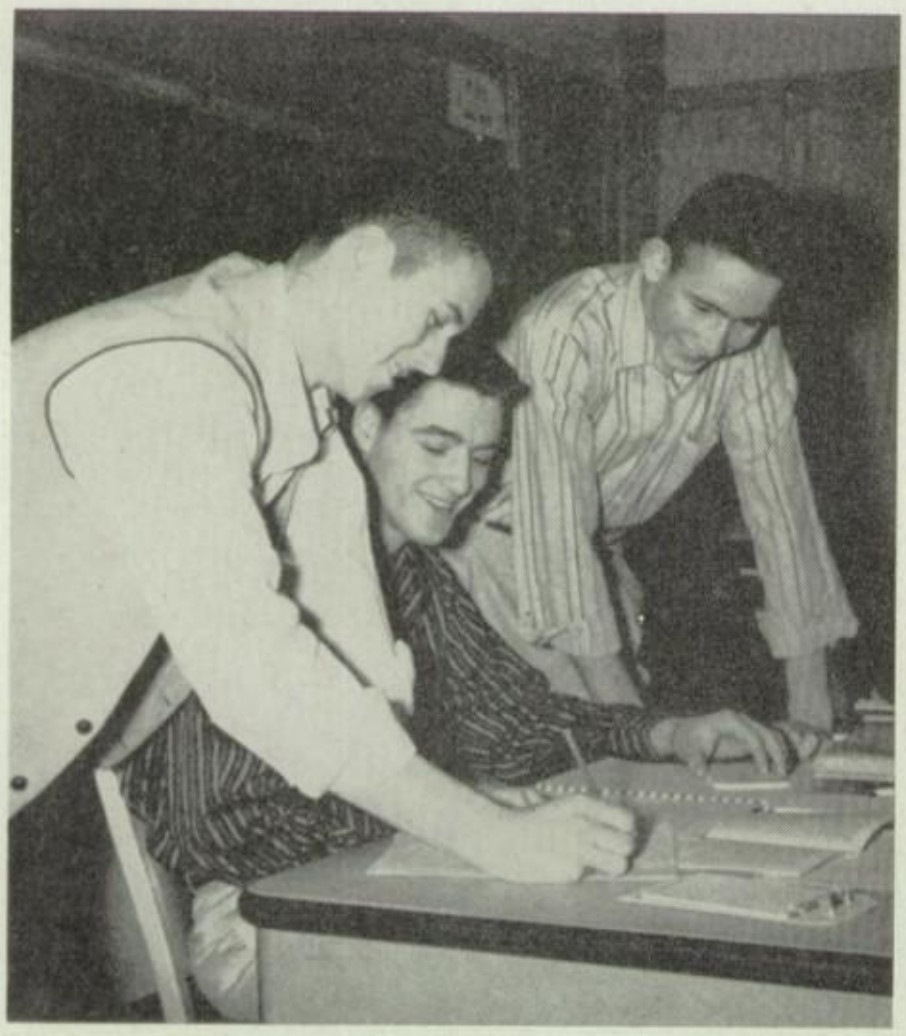
hi-y . . . blending service and social



The rap of a gavel was heard once again in the chambers of the capitol building in Topeka as the 1957-58 session of the Hi-Y model legislature was called to order. In the hectic hours following, Hi-Y members from every part of Kansas experienced the excitement of a legislature modeled on the lines of Kansas government. Speeches, debates, committee meetings, and all the intricacies of parliamentary procedure were the ingredients in this valuable lesson in representative government. Hi-Y delegates from S-M attended the pre-legislature held at K.U. in October. Some twenty-five S-Mites participated in the session of the model legislature in December, and several were elected to some of the top committee posts. The two day session in Topeka proved to be one of the most worthwhile phases of the Hi-Y program.

The Hi-Y meant many different things to Shawnee-Mission. For the majority of students, the Hi-Y pencils were the most visible evidence of this organization. Serving as chief pencil dispensers to the student body, the club raised money for its various projects. To the 125 boys in Hi-Y, the club gave an opportunity for social contacts and a means of Christian service to the world and the local community.

y-teens projects— products of faith

"The girls in Mrs. . . . Y-Teens group are to bring materials for their projects tomorrow." Announcements like this were often heard in the opening minutes of the school day. Seventeen groups, with an enrollment of five hundred girls, worked on service projects during the winter. Stuffed dolls, tray favors, and slippers seemed to be in demand and each of the Y-Teen groups worked hard to supply the market. While each group worked on its projects, the Y-Teens officers drew up a new and more efficient constitution. The groups, under the new constitution, were better represented in the cabinet. All the activities however were not serious, for along with spring March blew in the Y-Teen's dance. The gymnasium, bedecked with an array of color and prancing horses, proclaimed the theme of "Carousel." In May the swirl of petticoats and the clicking of high heels in the halls announced the Mother-Daughter Tea and the initiation of officers into whose hands would fall the duties of running this meritorious and worthwhile organization in the coming year.

Another fish story in the making as Fin and Feather members Pat Parks and Bruce Pfuetze prepare to feed the fish a line.

"Do you own a gun? What type of game have you hunted? What type of fishing do you prefer?" These questions and many others were asked of students interested in becoming members of one of the S-M Fin and Feather clubs. Those boys considered qualified and willing to work were accepted, and commenced to organize three of the more purposeful clubs in the school. These clubs were headed by Presidents Dave Hedges, John Herman, and Doug Mayor; and all of them were sponsored by Mr. McCullough and Mr. Shular. The organization's aims were to teach better methods of fishing and hunting, to promote game conservation and good sportsmanship, and to serve in the community. The first aims were well executed in the weekly meetings, and the boys enthusiastically carried through the last by completing different helpful projects. One of their projects involved posting signs on 300 farms around eastern Kansas; and another, collecting quail and duck stamps. Their most important activity involved taking a poll of sportsmen in cities over the state to obtain their opinions on questions pertaining to hunting and fishing. The results of the poll were mailed to many news services and the Game Commissioner, and it was hoped that this endeavor would help to improve the existing Kansas laws and regulations.

Although most S-Mites were not certain as to what their future would be, members of the FBLA—Future Business Leaders of America—were already beginning to work toward their future through their club. Members of chapter 272—the second oldest chapter of FBLA in the state—combined their interest and talents in adopting a family at Christmas time, selling concessions at a game, and attending night meetings. Membership was open to any interested student, preferably those who took a business course. Ninety Indians were in this organization plus others who formed a branch, the Stenoettes, well-known for their unique cards sold at Christmas time. A date marked on all calendars of FBLA'ers was the date of the state convention as well as the national convention. At the conventions Mr. and Miss FBLA, for state and nation, were selected by rigid competition which included being interviewed by three employers as if one were truly aspiring to a position in the business world. All members of this organization learned much to be used in a future career even if their contributions were to be in a diminutive degree.

A boy in a blue and gold jacket sat atop a fence and stared thoughtfully at a herd of cattle grazing nearby. They were registered Herefords, animals of his own which he had scientifically fed for his FFA project. Peeping chicks could be heard through the day in their plastic home, a project itself; and baa-a-a-ing sheep became a familiar sound to the boys as they carried on other individual and group projects. Four boys carefully tended a patch of tomatoes in one of the new greenhouses; one boy raised pork in a self-made "pig parlor." Experience, rather than experiments, taught the FFA'ers how to develop the agricultural methods to be used later in life.

The National Future Farmers of America Convention in October topped off the year's events by bringing boys from all over the country to meet together in Kansas City. In November a television appearance on KCMO informed the public about what the S-M agriculturists were doing in the way of projects and community service. At Christmas the club adopted a family to whom gifts of food, clothing, and toys were given, as a result of proceedings from the annual fun night. "Learning to do . . . Doing to learn . . . Earning to live . . . Living to serve," were words used to describe S-M's Future Farmers of America.

teenage tycoons—junior achievement

Shares of stock, taxes, charters, profit and loss, prices, dividends, and wages became familiar and important words to many high school students in Kansas City during the winter. The business men of K. C., through Junior Achievement, gave high school students a chance to learn how to run a company. This was the second year that Kansas City offered such an opportunity. Shawnee-Mission was first once again by having the highest representation in Junior Achievement. Forty-four companies, including a bank and a radio company, survived the winter and the taxes. Through the running of these companies, many S-Mites discovered the trials and tribulations of the business world. The students worked hard trying to make ends meet, and by spring the leading company had made a profit of two hundred dollars. Although taxes, prices, and keeping out of the red is grim business, the Junior Achievers found time for relaxation. Many of the members, during Christmas vacation, went to Des Moines, Iowa, for a three day conference. Also during the winter a "Stardust" ball was held for all the participants of Junior Achievement. In the spring, when the companies were closed and everyone went their separate ways, the Junior Achievers knew they took with them two things of immeasurable value—accomplishment and knowledge.

Organized confusion at its finest—the sophomore Indianettes demonstrate that it isn't hard at all!

Penne Payne and Peggy Carroll, drill team captains, sounded their commands, and the Indianettes began another tremendous and exacting performance. Each day during seventh hour the girls' gym echoed with the sounds of marching feet. Practice and patience combined to produce two red and white clad drill teams of thirty-six girls each. The junior team, under the direction of Mrs. Carolyn Howard, had been together for two years. The sophomore team was formed this year, and Miss Phyllis Heinke guided them.

Many hours of diligent work were put into each of the intricate steps, but every hour, day, and week of practice was rewarded as the teams stepped enthusiastically onto the floor. The junior Indianettes traveled from downtown Kansas City and the American Royal Parade to Liberty, Missouri, and an evening at William Jewell College. They also drilled at St. Joseph, Missouri, and North Kansas City High School. The sophomore drill team marched at the N.A.I.A. tournament, two of the junior highs, and several S-M events. Regardless of the time or place of their appearance, each performance made 1958 a most precise year for each Indianette.

The intramural program, having been so successful in the past few years, was greatly expanded this year to try to attract many more of S-M's unheralded but enthusiastic sportsmen. The boys' program added a chess, ping pong, and tennis tournament to the standard program of basketball and baseball. About 300 boys formed four leagues in the basketball competition while 150 boys composed five baseball teams. A group of about 50 boys could be seen clashing wits and brawn in each of the three newer activities. A girls' division of intramurals was also set up this year and their various activities were well accepted by those striving to shed the "weaker sex" classification. Among the activities which this group initiated were basketball, ping pong, softball, volleyball, and a special "Slenderella" program, one which the boys thought to be extremely practical. About 120 girls enjoyed the new program and it was considered by all to be a great success. This year's expansion was established by a new Student Congress committee that operated with excellent faculty sponsorship of its activities. Mr. Scharff and Mr. Meredith overlooked the boys' basketball and baseball while Miss Heinke and Mrs. Howard supervised the girls' work.

The seniors of 1958 completed their four years at Shawnee-Mission and became the last class to do so. They could look back on this, their last year, as a year of real accomplishments. As high men on the Indian totem pole, seniors left outstanding records in three major and three minor sports; in dramatics, where they had lead roles in six plays; in music, where they sang and played their way through the Cavalcade and Oklahoma! to California and to the position of best high school orchestra in the state; in debate, where they captured a state trophy; in clubs, where seniors held offices of important responsibility; and in Student Congress, where members, committee chairmen, and officers established policies and began new programs. Seniors held pivotal positions on publication staffs and on the cheerleading squad. Beauty and popularity shone in the smiles of the two queens and the scholarships won by seniors. The class officers—Jim Bryan, president; Gary Zuck, vice-president; Julie Baer, secretary; and Pat McMahon, treasurer—worked with Miss Barbara Rundell, head sponsor, to help the work of the twenty-six homerooms. The year was climaxed by two magic nights in May: one, when seniors danced all evening at the juniors' gift to them, the Prom; the other, the graduation ceremonies, when members of the class of '58 went from Shawnee-Mission to new fields—college, the armed services, occupations, and home life—and left behind them a record sure to last for many years.

improvements through impressions

Early in January, six nervous students were called to the office by Mr. Welch. Among the wondering waiters stood Mary Kay Hall and Charles Clark. After an explanation of their summons, looks of elation filled the previously bewildered faces. They had been chosen to take part in the Student Exchange program. On the twenty-ninth of January, Charles boarded a train—destination Tulsa—for two weeks of learning and sharing at Will Rogers High School. Mary Kay left for Dallas and Highland Park High School on March fifteenth. As guest students in these schools, they participated in many of the functions. Student Congress speeches, sports events, and parties were just a few of the activities in which they were engaged. Both schools were very interested in the organization of S-M's Pep Club and Student Congress. To Mary Kay and Charlie those trips were truly memorable. To the three schools involved, they were very beneficial.

"Track 99 for points south." Senior exchange students Charles Clark and Mary Kay Hall head for adventures in Tulsa and Dallas.

Bill Kramer, Dallas exchange student, remarks to Charles Clark, his guide, "It's almost as big as a Texas stadium!"

The class of '58 . . . the words held a familiar sound to nearly eight hundred seniors on the evening of May 29. As the silent black line wound slowly by to the measured beats of "Pomp and Circumstance," four years of memories were left behind. Eyes which were now solemn and attentive had once been restless, searching for answers the night before semesters, or eager and excited, urging Shawnee-Mission to victory in the last few minutes of overtime, or sharp and elusive, seeking loopholes in a debate opponent's argument. Ears, still tuned to highest frequency, could hear the echoes of shouts and cheers, the jests and quips of a favorite teacher, the sharp reprimand of one not so favorite, and the familiar drone of that 3:30 bell. Hands, now hanging motionless at sides, had only recently scratched ceaselessly with pen and pencil, or created beauty with paint and brush, or suffered term paper fatigue, or felt the familiar shape of pigskin and round ball. Feet which had once tapped to the rhythm of rock 'n roll had graduated to the quiet shuffle of waltz or foxtrot. Voices, now silent, had shouted, answered questions, or stumbled over lines of archaic Shakespeare. And now as the rustle of parchment filled the air, the class of '58 was being dissolved; but the real diploma for four years of hard work was carried away in the minds of S-M's newest alums.

To order style 14 or 15? Julana Ragland makes the big decision.

Delinquent or delayed? Patty Wolford, Dawn Eddy, Joan Cooper, Susan Bras, and Flo Renard wait for the eighth-hour bus.

"Bang! And they are off!" The nine hundred strong class of "59" started the year feeling not quite so lost as juniors. Having joined the ranks of upperclassmen, they also undertook many major positions earned through much hard work and determination. American History and Shakespeare's Macbeth were tackled by all the members along with their outside activities. They were represented by both "A" and "B" team cheerleaders as well as constituting a large percentage of the varsity teams. The American Field Service selected two top juniors to represent the United States, while the faculty chose others to represent Shawnee-Mission at Girls' and Boys' state. Also five per cent of the class took their place in the coveted National Honor Society. The INDIAN, music and drama productions, debate, and Student Congress kept the second-year students busy and happy. In the spring, these students not only campaigned for Student Body offices, but also spent long hard hours preparing for the split of S-M. New school colors, name, ring, and other regulations had to be selected in order that both schools could run smoothly the next year. Designing an evening of enchantment, the juniors were hosts for the Junior-Senior Prom, a night long to be remembered. Led by officers, Birch Carson, David Niven, Anne Miner, and Bea Robinett, the class reached the finish line with flying colors.

That's what the sign says, gals. Just wait until the bell rings, then you can go to lunch.

It's a long way from Dallas, but the welcome of 1500 Kansas Pepsters makes Texans Diana Clarke and Bill Kramer feel at home.

Diana Clark and Bill Kramer, the Dallas exchange students, flash Texan smiles on their windblown K.C. welcomers.

oklahoma hello impresses exchange students

The assignment of S-M's junior exchange students—to promote understanding of high schools in the United States as well as to learn new ideas usable at Shawnee-Mission—benefitted the students who participated greatly, but even more the whole student body. One week at Northwest Classen High School in Oklahoma City broadened the outlook of Morgan O'Leary. Excellent school spirit, exceptionally good food, and the informality of class in their building, only three years old, especially impressed Morgan. The Knights of Oklahoma City, proud of their name, used the symbol in all students activities. Spending two weeks in Tulsa at the Will Rogers High School, Anne Miner encountered many ideas. The No. 1 basketball team and the difference in student government were noticed almost immediately. More important and lasting in the minds of these exchange students, was not the differences in the school systems, but the noticeable likenesses.

You can come out; the coast is clear. You're home now and among your friends, Anne Miner and Morgan O'Leary, junior exchangees.

It's spring, and the senior boys' fancies turn to thoughts other than food during the lunch hour.

planning process

Through the minds of the sophomore class ran thoughts of, "This is our only year together. We've got to make the most of it." So they did. Right off the bat they formed a completely new committee in Student Congress. This called for a community car window wash and a national safety convention which entailed months of detailed planning. The peppiest sophomore girls took most of the places on the B team cheerleading squad, and their classmates took most of the pepster awards. Prancing about in snappy uniforms, the newly formed sophomore girls' drill team did their stuff. Hundreds of sophomore he-men practiced their bouncing, kicking, slicing, smashing, and even diving in order to carry their respective teams to victory. Glory shone down on various members of the class: one won the school-wide ping-pong tournament, another was a finalist for Auto Show queen; and two others were chosen outstanding by the Optimists Club. Both boys and girls scrambled to sign up as waiters and cake cutters at the Prom. Others tried out for and got parts in "Dear Phoebe." Two topnotch sophomores were chosen to represent Shawnee-Mission as exchange students to Oklahoma and Texas high schools. Learning to locate library books and filling out yellow passes got to be old stuff; but as the year closed, the class of '60 realized that nothing would ever be quite as great as their sophomore year at Shawnee-Mission.

for s-m—new friends and a new tradition

What is the difference between S-M and other top high schools of the nation? Sophomores Steve McNees and Merrily Price, like the Knights of the Roundtable, went on quests seeking the answer to this baffling question. Their quests led them into two unfamilar places, Dallas, Texas, and Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. While there, each knight became one of the inhabitants and followed the local customs which they found very similar to those of their own castle, S-M. By living like other students of that locality, Merrily and Steve attempted to find the answer to the question so that S-M might profit from the experiences of others. While at Dallas and Oklahoma City the two sophomores went to school, attended parties, and went on dates. In Dallas a terrible plague of measles broke out. Steve caught them, but he soon recovered. After seeking many days the two knights found the answer and returned home to Shawnee-Mission with fame won and quests fulfilled.

Glimpsing in a book of memories, Steve McNees and Merrily Price recall their experiences in their adopted high schools.

"california, here we come"

From rambunctious piccolos to majestic tubas—the band gives its toe-tapping spectators a pre-Rose Bowl concert.

Why were S-M students and teachers wearing artificial roses in December? These loyal Indians were not observing an early spring—they were celebrating their band's invitation to the 1958 Tournament of Roses in Pasadena, California. The first Kansas band ever to attend the Rose Bowl, the group was one of twenty chosen high school bands in the nation. The musicians raised the necessary funds and boarded the train for Pasadena amid balloons, banners, and well-wishers. On New Year's Day, television fans from coast to coast saw the S-M band strutting in a seven and one-half mile panorama of the flowers, floats, and beautiful girls. While on the Pacific coast, the group also toured Disneyland and played a concert there. After spending a day seeing more of California, they took the train for home. In thirty-six hours the band was back in Kansas, thrilled to have had the chance to represent S-M in the world-famous Tournament of Roses.

Hi Gerri!
Wasn't it fun in typing class. It has been wonderful knowing you. Hope you have a good typing class next year. Best of luck in the future.

At least I know how to spell + pronounce your name. Isn't that smart of me. I never forget the slumber party where you fell and cracked your elbow - or was that your head; Or the slumber party where you were little-boy-bent. Congratulations to you on your scholarship and Best of Luck to you in College and be sure to write to me while I am at Baker. Have fun this summer and change out your life.

"Don't worry, we'll be back in a week." Bob Cathey and Roger Pilley comfort their mothers' troubled minds.

Dear Gene,
It certainly has been a long time now & it doesn't seem possible that we are now going to graduate. I sure hope you will write me & let me know how everything is next year. Please don't forget. You'll probably have lots of fun & meet lots of new kids & go to lots of parties next year. Lot of luck

These have been wonderful years!
I don't think I ever will forget some of the hectic times we've had!
Take care in future years— I'd like to hear from you.

Gerre -
It sure has been fun working on the Mission with you. This year is really the first year I've gotten to know you. I certainly am glad I didn't miss the opportunity. Best of luck in future years.

memories are made of this

Dear Gene Lee,

This is awfully hard to write on paper the things we've done and the fun we've had, & the unhappiness we've had these four years. We've each had our share of bad luck and good luck with those adorable creatures known as men (boys). I guess we'll have a lot more trial & tribulations in the years to come and I hope they all work out as well as they have so far. You'll be studying like a fiend next year and I'll be loafing, but at least we'll be within shouting distance so we shouldn't lose contact. You can always get me a blind date with one of those neat K. C. U. boys if you really want to. Of course even if you don't want to you can still do it. Seriously I hope we can double or just get together next year since we're so close together and all. Well I've written a small volume & said not much so I'll run down now.

Love,
Carol Paggett

Gene Lee:

I've been so sincerely happy to have become better acquainted with you this year. You were a decided asset to "Opening Night". Your happy outlook on life has helped me out of many a blue mood. Thank you. I think very highly of you, Gene, and I say that with all sincerity.

Lynn Minier

"yes, i'd simply adore to sign your indian"

Dear Gene;

I really would like to sign this. It has been really super goofin off with you in the Times's office. I hope you have a ball this summer and be sure to take care. Be good, and be sure to call me sometime.

Dear Gene,
Well the year has come to a close once more but this one is our last at I-M. As we go our separate ways may this book help us now and then to stop and think of all the joys & sorrows we've shared. Giving comfort to one another in klass when we thought we didn't do so good, and discussing tests after class (citizenship). Yes this year is gone all too fast but who knows the future may have much better things in store. Call me & come out if you get a chance this summer. Good luck.

Dear Gene —
I'm glad I have this chance to tell you how much I think of you! It is a pleasure to know you & be with you. You are a charming little person and I know you will always be very happy & successful. It is with your vivacious personality you will attract many friends. I did enjoy being in drama class with you. I know this may sound like a steam-roller type of writing & I guess it is!
Good luck always,

Dear Gene, Sue,
Haven't we had a terrific time (I guess we can't tell) in Journalism. I think I learned something. Love, Mary Kay

Gene,
Well we both made it only 13 years. Simply remarkable, isn't it? Best of luck and happiness
Joyce Garrett

Gene—
It has been a ball getting to know you this Senior year. Wasn't "Opening Night" fun?
Best always in future & hope you have all the happiness possible.

got a minute? tell me all you know

Gene, has it really been great knowing you. I hope we can keep in touch. Homeroom has been a ball. Good luck to a mighty sweet gal.
Love, Peggy Ogan

Gene,
I really have enjoyed seeing your friendly smile every day, and I thought you did a wonderful job in "Opening Night." Best of luck in the future years.
Sincerely,

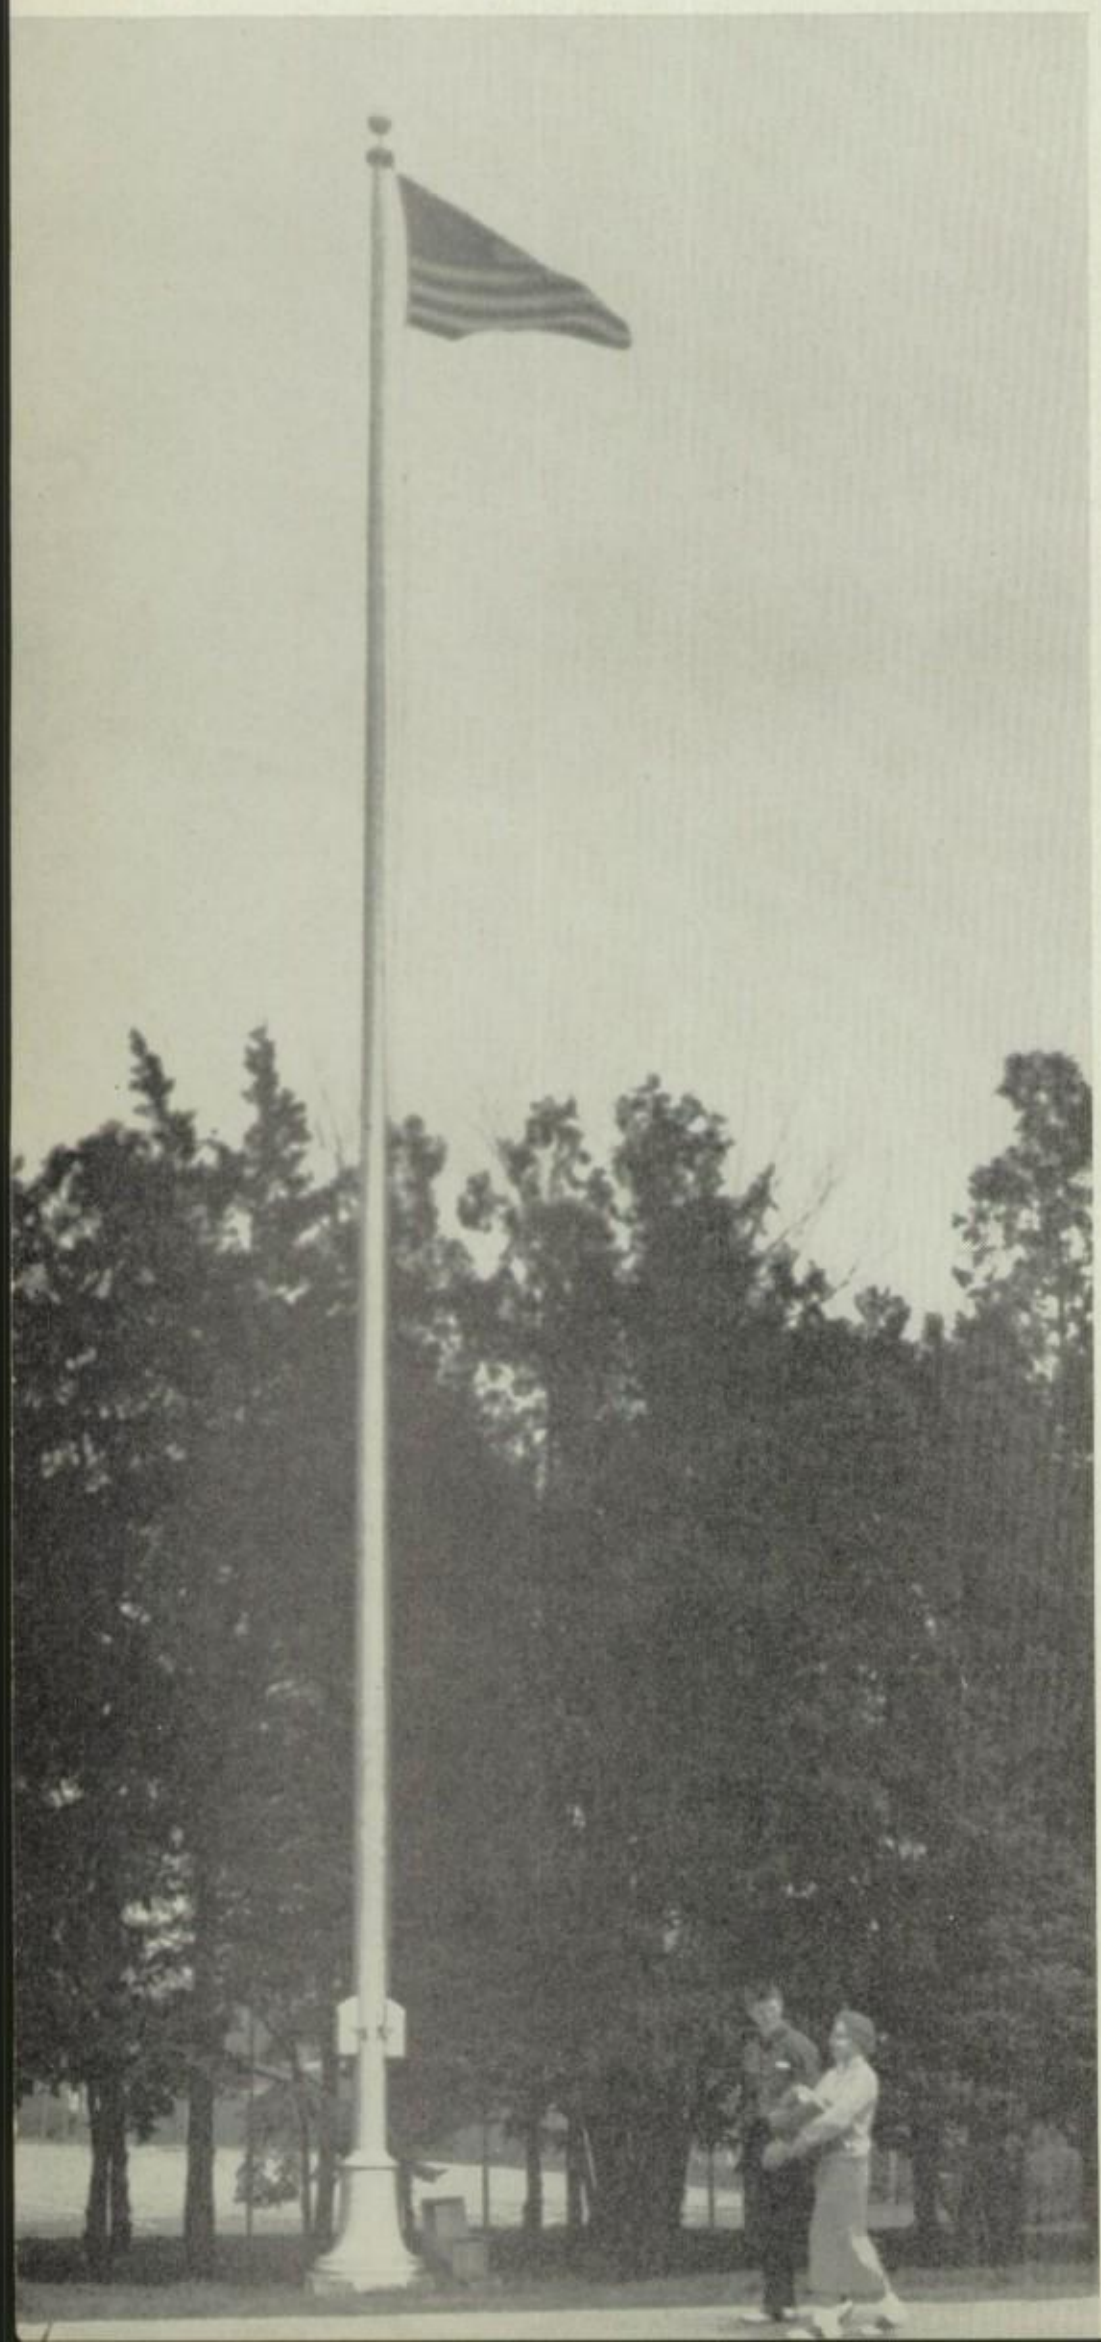
the past . . . as a light to the future



Again in 1957-58 experiences of the past promised to be the best teachers for the future. The successes and failures of the year were lessons to be studied to avert the same mistakes and repeat the same triumphs. When Russia launched the first man-made earth satellite, Sputnik I, shortly followed by Sputnik II, alarmists declared the United States a failure in the field of science as well as hopelessly outclassed militarily. Several months later, the U. S. answered the world by sending aloft three of her own "baby" moons. To Americans this drama meant a close scrutiny of the educational system, an increased emphasis on math and science, and possible reforms in so-called "soft" schools. Elsewhere in the world, tiny Monaco celebrated again . . . the occasion, the birth of an heir to the throne. In the sports world, Milwaukee and Notre Dame celebrated, too. This was the year the Yankees lost the Series to the Braves and mighty Oklahoma fell before the Irish. The rock n' roll world went into mourning as Elvis Presley, sideburns and all, heeded the Army's gentle call, the draft. A new state for the Arabs and states' rights for Little Rock . . . open warfare in the fashion world over the chemise, trapeze, and balloon styles—this was history. Would its lessons be heeded?
